CARTER OPENS DRIVE BY DENOUNCING FORD AS TIMID PRESIDENT

Pledges 'Tough Management and Careful Planning Leading to a Balanced Budget'

By CHARLES MOHR
Special to The New York Times
WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Sept. 6—Jimmy Carter formally began his election campaign today, portraying himself as the representative of a "new generation of leadership" and his opponent, President Ford, as timid and ineffectual. Mr. Carter, the Democratic nominee, evoked the names and political images of two Presidents drawn from the American aristocracy, Franklin D. Roosevelt and John F. Kennedy, suggesting that he was in some ways their political heir. But he carefully gave himself a different personal image—that of a Georgia "farm boy," with his roots in working and middle-class America, who had "derived my opinions" from listening to the voices of that constituency. "It's time for a change," said Mr. Carter this morning as he stood before the simple, small white dwelling where President Roosevelt died in 1945. A crowd of several thousand people were standing before him on a shaded knoll under a canopy of tall and gnarled trees.

Special Interests Barred

They gave a burst of sustained applause when Mr. Carter said, "As a political candidate, I owe nothing to special interests. I owe everything to the people." Mr. Carter attacked President Ford by indirection, saying that "scandals and corruption have hit us like hammer blows" and citing what he called the stealing or wasting of billions of dollars in the Medicaid program and irregularities in the Central Intelligence Agency and Federal Bureau of Investigation. "No one seems to be in charge," the Democratic candidate asserted, "no one seems to be responsible." Two hours later Mr. Carter stood chewing gum in the midst of an authentic Southern folk ritual, the annual 500-mile stock car race at Darlington, S.C. The shouts of more than 50,000 fans were drowned out by the deafening roar and

Kissinger Says Talks With Vorster Open Way for Africa Negotiations

Citing 'Progress' at Zurich, He Voices Hope for Accords on Rhodesia and South-West Africa

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN
Special to The New York Times
LONDON, Sept. 6—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today that after three days of crucial talks with Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa, "I believe that the conditions for a negotiation exist" for black and white Africans to settle the key problems of Rhodesia and South-West Africa before violence engulfs the area. At a news conference in Zurich before his departure for London, Mr. Kissinger expressed hope about the prospects for achieving a negotiated solution to those problems in southern Africa, although it was clear that the Kissinger-Vorster talks had not focused heavily on the third issue—that of racial problems in white-ruled South Africa itself. "These discussions have been fruitful," Mr. Kissinger said, adding that as a result of his talks with Mr. Vorster, "progress" had been made toward the objectives of majority rule, minority rights and harmony in the area, instead of violence be-

Russian Lands New MIG-25 In Japan, Seeking U.S. Refuge

Special to The New York Times
TOKYO, Sept. 6—A Soviet Air Force lieutenant flew one of the most advanced Soviet jet fighters, the MIG-25, to Japan today and said he wanted to seek refuge in the United States.

The plane, a twin-engine craft, landed at Hakodate on the northern island of Hokkaido at 1:57 P.M. The pilot fired two warning pistol shots to keep airport workers away from the plane and then asked the police to cover the plane with a canvas because it contained military secrets. The Soviet pilot has been identified as Viktor I. Belenko, a lieutenant of the Soviet Air Force. The pilot spent the night at a secret place on the outskirts of Hakodate. The MIG-25 was heavily guarded throughout the night by the police. The Foreign Ministry has begun consultation with the United States Govern-

SCHOOLS IN SUBURBS FACE TROUBLED YEAR

Strikes by Teachers and Austerity Are Likely for Many Districts

By PRANAY GUPTA
As public schools in the New York area's suburbs open throughout this week, the academic year is once again beginning against a backdrop of budget deficits, staff cutbacks and a generally continuing decline in enrollment. But this year, a record number of school districts will operate on austerity programs, and a record number of teachers may go on strike. Austerity for thousands of students could mean no school bus transportation, no football games and virtually no other athletics. For parents austerity will bring more driving to get their children to school. "This looks like a bad season for schools," Alice F. Willett, a consultant to the Nassau-Suffolk School Boards Association, said in an interview yesterday. "The mood is of apprehension on everybody's part—parents, teachers, board members and pupils." Such a mood is deepened by a perception on the part of many educators that state and local government officials have not addressed themselves with much vigor to alleviating the growing number of problems. "There's a kind of lessening of priorities in terms of education," said Richard Leonard, a high school teacher and presi-

Swiss, Stable and Affluent, Facing Problems From Too Much Success

By FLORA LEWIS
Special to The New York Times
ZURICH—Switzerland is in trouble. Its money is too strong, its banks are too reliable, its democracy is too stubbornly entrenched and its Government is too responsive to the grass roots. That is the rueful, if not a little smug, assessment by political, financial, labor, intellectual and other leading Swiss figures of the present state of their country. After all, they conclude, being an island of stability in a turbulent world, with a reputation for other liberties and discretions, is not all chocolate creams and edelweiss. The difficulties that result are both practical and cultural. The luxuriant Swiss franc, overnourished by other people's money-seeking safe havens, has hurt the crucial export and tourist industries by making Swiss goods and services more expensive to foreigners. Traditional prudence and suspicion of what is novel or untried has left the watch industry and some other important sectors behind the times technologically. And general dislike of the exceptional, the avant-garde, leadership and government beyond the most immediate level, has left many Swiss with a sense of plodding mediocrity and constraint in trying to deal with exciting and urgent world problems. Although it is up-to-date in appearance, Switzerland seems to have gotten off the troubled, restless world. This is a condition that almost all its people consider cosy and admirable but nonetheless, for the thoughtful ones who feel responsible

U. S. REACHES ACCORD WITH NORTH KOREANS TO PREVENT CLASHES

PANMUNJOM WILL BE DIVIDED

Pact Signed at Truce Site Provides for Removal of 4 Communist Posts in Southern Area

By DAVID BINDER
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, Sept. 6—The American-led United Nations Command and North Korea today concluded an agreement on new security arrangements for the truce site of Panmunjom aimed at preventing clashes such as the one on Aug. 18 in which two American Army officers were killed. The agreement, which amends the 1953 truce accord that ended the Korean War, calls for partitioning the joint security area that has existed at Panmunjom. North Korea is to remove the four guard posts it has had in the southern part of the area, which is about 800 yards in diameter. It was in the southern part that the Aug. 18 clash took place as a United Nations crew was trimming a tree whose foliage blocked the view of what might be happening at a United Nations post in the southwestern corner near two of the North Korean posts. The tree was later cut down after an American show of force.

Military Units Will Be Separated

The agreement, which was announced simultaneously by the United Nations Command at Panmunjom and at the State Department, calls for elimination of contact between the military units of North Korea and the United Nations Command by restricting them to their respective sides of the demarcation line cutting through the truce site. Panmunjom is situated within the demilitarized zone that runs along the truce line, about 35 miles northeast of Seoul. While the traditional concept of Panmunjom as a jointly controlled area is being eliminated, the agreement calls for free movement there for nonmilitary personnel such as work details, tourists and journalists.

The accord was signed for the United Nations Command by Rear Adm. Mark P. Frudden Jr. of the United States and for North Korea by Maj. Gen. Han Ju Kyong. Formal negotiations were begun last Tuesday in Panmunjom by delegations headed by an American colonel and a North Korean colonel, the secretaries of the Joint Military Armistice Commission. The draft agreement they reached was submitted today to the signers, the senior delegates on the commission, which was established at the close of the Korean War. The text of the agreement, which has

Vietnam Tells U.S. 12 of Missing Pilots Were Killed in War

Special to The New York Times
PARIS, Sept. 6—The Vietnamese Embassy here today made public the names of 12 missing American pilots and said they had been killed in action in the war in Indochina.

A list of the 12 names was handed to the American Embassy and was published by the Vietnamese with a statement expressing hope that the United States "will show its good will and take concrete action to settle postwar problems between the two countries." The Vietnamese action was believed to be linked to a forthcoming debate in the United Nations Security Council on Vietnam's application for membership in the world organization. The United States vetoed applications by North and South Vietnam last year on the ground that they should not be admitted unless South Korea and North Korea were also allowed to join. Since then Vietnam has been unified into a single country, thus removing the similarity between the Vietnamese and Korean situations. Moreover, South Korea is understood not to be pressing so hard for membership this year.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said recently that the United States' attitude on Vietnamese admission this year would depend on Hanoi's willingness to help in the effort to determine the fate of missing Americans. He left open the decision on how the United States would vote in the Security Council debate. The Vietnamese made public only the names, dates of birth and serial numbers of the dead pilots. Further information was understood to be registered at the Department of Defense in Washington, which said it would notify next of kin before releasing any details. The United States has been pressing four points, was not immediately made public for what officials described as technical reasons. But officials did disclose its provisions, some of which took effect immediately, with others to do so in 10 days. They said that the agreement alluded to the Aug. 18 incident by declaring that it had become "evident" that additional measures were needed to guarantee the safety of personnel in the joint security area. The first point provides that the demarcation line at the armistice commission's meeting site, where seven buildings are situated, is to be marked by a cement pavement 20 inches wide and 2 inches high. In all other sectors of the joint security area the line is to be marked by 4-inch-square concrete posts that are 1 meter (3 feet 2 inches) high at 10 meter (32 feet) intervals. The second point says that all military personnel are to avoid crossing the demarcation line into the area of the opposite side.

The New York Times/Sept. 7, 1976 Accord stemmed from clash over tree (cross), which blocked view from U.N. post (1) of isolated post (2).

When members of the Military Armistice Commission cross the line they are not to number more than 15 persons. But there is to be free movement in the buildings of the joint commission. Any other movements of personnel may be made only with permission from the other side. Nonmilitary personnel, while allowed to move freely in the security area, may cross the demarcation line only by showing identification to representatives of the other side at the conference building. Vehicles are to cross the line only with prior consent. Neither military nor civilian personnel are allowed "to make contacts" in the joint security area infringing on the safety of the other side. Each side assumes responsibility for the safety of the others' personnel. The third point provides that guard posts will be maintained only on the respective sides of the demarcation line and that neither side will erect visual barriers or other obstructions to line-of sight vision. The fourth point says that after the signing, an international team will approve a "re-mapping" of boundaries. In the interval, it is to be marked, guard posts removed to conform with the agreement and orders are to be prohibiting contacts between personnel of the two sides. Today's agreement forms the original Korean armistice. It appears that the signature Korean representative, Gen viewed by the United Nations as covering the Chinese, as Korea did not sign the armistice. The signing was immediately a joint statement by the United States and the Chinese. The statement called for "realistic and constructive" both Seoul and Washington every effort to see that the arrangements are implemented.

Hanoi for information on about 2,500 Americans still unaccounted for in the war in Indochina. The Vietnamese handed over the list of seven Air Force and five Navy officers this noon, some hours before Mr. Kissinger was due to arrive in Paris for talks with President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing. The Vietnamese statement said the Government was prepared to open talks with the United States on "undertaking to contribute to healing the wounds of war and the reconstruction of Vietnam," and on "the reconstruction of Vietnam," and on "the search for information on Americans missing in Vietnam." The United States has taken the position so far that the pledge of reconstruction aid was nullified by Hanoi's resumption of warfare that led to the fall of Saigon last year. The question of missing Americans has repeatedly been advanced by Washington as an obstacle to "normalizing" relations with Hanoi.

these, 785 are listed as missing in action, and the others killed in action. The 12 names released by the Vietnamese were believed to include six from the list of killed in action in Vietnam and six from the missing list.

U.S. Wants Full Accounting

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6—The White House and the State Department welcomed the release of information today by the Vietnamese Government on 12 Americans missing in action, but coupled this with demands for a full accounting. According to official United States records, the remains of a total of 2,505 Americans are still unaccounted for. Of

India Orders Civil Servants to Limit Their Families

By WILLIAM BORDERS
Special to The New York Times
NEW DELHI, Sept. 6—The Government of India, continuing its stepped-up program of birth control, has decided to limit the size of its employees' families to three children each.
The ruling, an amendment to the civil-service conduct rules circulated over the weekend, is part of a major Government policy promulgated last April, giving "top national priority" to slowing the population increase.
With the tacit encouragement of the central Government, several states are drawing up legislation providing for compulsory sterilization of people who have more than two or three children, and clinics that offer prizes and cash bonuses for vasectomies are opening up all over the country. "No community or group can be allowed to stand in the way," Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said not long ago in a vigorous defense of her new birth control program. "We simply cannot afford to be a flabby nation," she added.
The latest ruling gives civil servants one more year to add to their families by exempting anyone who has more than three children as of Sept. 30, 1977. After that date, it decrees: "Every Government servant shall insure that the number of his children does not exceed three." The federal Government has three million employees, but no estimate was available today of how many of them are of child-bearing age, or of the size of their families.

Although the Government announcement did not say as much specifically, it was presumed that any civil servant who had a fourth child after next September would be dismissed. Since Government jobs are among the most highly prized, because of the security they offer, the ruling amounts to a very strong encouragement to family planning.
Earlier this year, the Government said it would penalize employees and other residents of New Delhi who had big families by restricting their access to some public services, such as housing and health care. This latest ruling is much more specific.
With a population exceeding 600 million, India has three times as many people as the United States, occupying about a third as much territory. One-seventh of all the people in the world are Indians and they are increasing at a rate of more than a million a month.
"We are facing a population explosion of crisis dimensions, which has largely diluted the fruits of the remarkable economic progress that we have made," the Health Minister, Karan Singh, said last April when he announced what he said would be an aggressive new attack on population growth.

Stressing Self-Reliance, Is Finding Road to Socialism Rough

By A. ANDELMAN
Special to The New York Times
LAOS, Sept. 1—The Communist Party of Laos, who for nine months in control of the Government, are attempting to transform this tiny landlocked country into a socialist state.
The date has been mixed. The reeling from the effects of a drought that is just beginning to show its effects in its most remote regions.
In the countryside, particularly in the north and northeast, it is the Pathet Lao troops or a venture outside the capital, little has been heard of the cycle of the country.
The Pathet Lao, though the din of largely given way to the cycle of the country.
But the strict measures taken to insure its plans and philosophy a far more intense by the presence of every-thing—the Pathet Lao in their baggy green fatigues slung over their shoulders everywhere through the country.

sent to re-education centers deep in the jungles or mountains.
Many sent to the camps were members of the old rightist regime that was deposed gradually, quietly in a revolution that is called "typically Lao" and that culminated last Dec. 2 in the final abolition of the monarchy and creation of a people's democratic socialist republic. But there were as well many "reactionaries and their lackeys," including prostitutes and bar girls as well as those who were caught walking the streets with long hair or immodest clothes, who were sent off to be re-educated.
Some, such as former Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma, the elder statesman of conciliation and accommodation, have been allowed to continue living in their homes in Vientiane. But Prince Souvanna, who is said to be ill and whose title is Counselor to the Government, has been stripped of his power and reportedly spends most days with little to do.
Others, even harmless old men, former Information Minister Ouday Souvannoung, former Minister of Posts and Telegraphs Touby Lyfong and thousands more, have been spirited out of their homes in and around the capital and sent off to the viengsay—a word that for many Laotians has begun to take on threatening proportions far beyond any evidence of torture or severe physical coercion that they believe could be taking place there.

Few have returned. And most of those who have come back have joined an estimated 200,000 or more other Laotians in fleeing across the Mekong River to Thailand.
Those who most ardently support the Pathet Lao's revolution point particularly to this new national pride, the work ethic.
In June, in a major address to the Supreme People's Council, Prime Minister Kaysonne Phommvihane, who as secretary general of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party is clearly the leading figure in the country, outlined these priorities and acknowledged major problem areas. And last week, in an interview here, Information Minister Sisana Sisane repeated the list, indicating that few if any of these difficulties have yet been resolved.
Problem of Security Is Stressed
Mr. Kaysonne's list included the following:
"In the area of security, 'commando remnants have built commando strongholds to create disturbances in certain areas with the hope of creating further strongholds, hoping to overthrow our administrative power in various local areas so as to create chaos in the rural areas and unrest in towns with the view to undermining the efficiency of our administration."
"Under the former regime, 'the amount of rice and other food imported from foreign countries kept increasing every year. It was even more dependent on foreign countries in acquiring other necessities. The level of self-sufficiency in the country is extremely low."
"The major flight of refugees from Laos has robbed the country of most of its skilled technocrats, agriculture specialists, economists and businessmen." Mr. Kaysonne observed: "The enemy cajoled tens of thousands of Lao citizens, including intellectuals, engineers and skilled workers, to flee with him to Thailand. The enemy also took with him Lao property, factory machines and transport vehicles. In addition, he also abruptly and drastically cut his assistance to Laos, set up an economic blockade against our country by unilaterally closing the border and ceased to guarantee the Vientiane kip." The kip is the basic unit of currency, which has taken a severe beating on the open market in recent months.

Black-marketeers were braving the travel restrictions, moving off into the countryside seeking to barter goods from the capital for the scarce meat, fish, and poultry that had virtually disappeared from the small local markets that had been set up to decentralize the large morning market in downtown Vientiane.
Prices were far outstripping the remotest means of the average Lao, who was being paid little more than $6 to $10 a month at the black-market exchange rate, or $30 to $40 a month at the official, highly unrealistic rate.
The Government finally stepped in during July, lifting the travel ban and allowing goods to begin flowing again toward the city.
Prices are still high, but at least there is food again in the markets.
The security situation also began to improve gradually. The number and intensity of incidents have, by most reports, begun to drop, but bands of marauders still make travel dangerous on the road from Savannakhet to Pakse.
As a result of the security situation, or for a host of other reasons more closely connected with the origins of the Pathet Lao movement in the remote jungle provinces of northeastern Laos, the Government still operates behind a veil of the utmost secrecy.

Must Understand
The Pathet Lao itself dismisses the frequently with the e, "The people must understand the hardships that officials believe growing pains involved in the spirit of self-reliance 'purely Lao' state, society

Militancy of 'Coloreds' Shocks South Africa

By MICHAEL T. KAUFMAN
Special to The New York Times

CAPE TOWN, Sept. 6—Last week's disturbances here, touched off by marches of colored schoolchildren, have alarmed white South Africa perhaps even more than the earlier rioting by blacks in cities across the country.

"You have to understand," said a white columnist who is a longstanding opponent of apartheid, "that in the framework of separate development, the coloreds have traditionally been the most favored."

Unlike the blacks, the mixed-race "coloreds" have been allowed to own property and are not subject to pass laws. They have greater social and economic mobility than blacks, and whites do not need a permit to visit them in their homes. Thus it has long been an article of faith here that the coloreds themselves are afraid of black dominance and aspire to white life styles.

Leaders Are Rejected

But the disorders have challenged such assumptions. "The most astounding thing for us here," said the columnist, "has been to watch colored and black youths standing together, saying exactly the same thing."

What exactly these youths are saying is, according to colored interpreters here, slightly more ambiguous than a hurried rock. "One thing that seems very clear," said a colored intellectual, "is that they are not only rejecting the entire system of separate development, they are also rejecting our traditional leaders."

The dominant leader over the years has been Sonny Leon, a 65-year-old labor organizer who heads the Colored Labor Party. Because of his views and statements he has in the past been shorn of his passport and of his post on the Colored Representative Council by the Government of Prime Minister John Vorster.

The council is a largely powerless body composed of elected and Government-appointed delegates. In theory, it proposes the budget and other policies that govern the lives of the country's 2.3 million people of mixed white, black and Malay ancestry. In practice, its decisions can be, and usually are, overridden by the white Minister of Colored Affairs.

Yet despite Mr. Leon's long opposition to the power structure, the younger colored people are increasingly finding him and his generation of leaders irrelevant. And this, according to some white observers here, is perhaps the major statement of the marches and demonstrations.

Mr. Leon commented somewhat poignantly today on the protests in an interview and hinted at his own sense of growing obsolescence. "They charge us with working within the system by maintaining the Representative Council as a farce," he said. "It is a farce. But I say to them, why are you then in the universities which are separate and a part of the system. I say to them that we have the council because it gives us a forum, a platform from which at least our own people can hear us and rally together."

But Mr. Leon warned, "The day is coming when we, the established leaders, can no longer control our people."

The students say that day has already come. A group of them, speaking mildly and reminding a visitor of the early civil rights activists who staged sit-ins at soda fountains in North Carolina in the early 1960's with the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, maintained that something significant had changed in colored consciousness.

"A few years ago, I think, most coloreds wanted very much to be like whites," said a young girl who with the others agreed to speak under guarantees of anonymity. "Our people had small advantages over the blacks and we were easily led into rejecting our black patrimony."

Now, she said, the mood of the community is one of complete solidarity with blacks and with Indians. "We know we are all the victims of a system that must change and that is our only demand, an immediate end to inequality."

Some Call Them Naive

A relative absence of ideology, or even program, emerged from the talk with the students. It is this that has led some of their older sympathizers to term the young generation of colored activists naive.

Some of the students talked of a continuing wave of protests. Some thought that labor action such as strikes, which are illegal in this country, might develop. None talked openly of armed struggle. A few called themselves socialists but a style they drew much more from the United States civil rights movement than from any African liberation struggle.

When asked which revolutionary figures they most admired, most mentioned

Malcolm X and the late Dr. Martin Luther King. Some mentioned the late Dr. Kwame Nkrumah. Quite a few mentioned Adam Smith, a middle-aged poet who lives in a tent here and whose works in English speak to the spirit of their African roots. A few are beginning to wear African beaded necklaces.

Mr. Leon in his interview was skeptical of the objectives of dialogue. "The only winning concessions for us is armed struggle. Truth is that we do not know what to do here. We are in a situation here that exists in Mozambique," he said. "We know we have weapons and we have a help us."

Switzerland Faces Problems Caused by Too Much Success

on spending hundreds of millions to hold down the value of the Swiss franc.

It was a joke, of course. The idea of window-smashing could only be a joke in Switzerland. But it was also Swiss to the core, since it showed how even disorder might be turned to a thrifty, pragmatic purpose.

While bankers, politicians, union leaders and welfare administrators apologize a little for their country's unfashionable serenity, they and others go on to say that it is pleasant to live without turmoil, and they are determined to keep things that way.

Hard Work and Compromise

The basic reasons advanced for the society's well-being in a distraught world are remarkably similar, whether they come from writers or businessmen, officials or psychiatrists, rich or poor.

They have to do with a long history of struggle, which imposed both the habits of hard work and willingness to compromise as the conditions for survival. The Swiss were not always pacific, or neutral. For several centuries they eked out a living by sending their sons abroad to fight as mercenaries, a tradition whose ironic reversal with the import of foreign labor over the last generation still surprises people here and makes them uneasy.

"We went too fast, we expanded too much," said Leo Schurmann, deputy director of the central bank. But the economic recession snapped everyone back into customary caution. In less than two years, inflation was forced down from a record 12 percent to a little over 2 percent, without strikes or any noticeable social tension among the Swiss, although endemic xenophobia did erupt and many foreign workers were abruptly and heartlessly sent packing.

Officials concede that, having imported sensation on a partisan, language, cantonal and religious basis.

Since compromise is the rule and conflict is shunned as highly unseemly, politicians have no easy way to develop an individual image and incumbents are almost always re-elected until they die or retire.

Women were given the vote in national elections only five years ago, and two cantons still do not permit them to vote in the far more important cantonal elections, but almost everyone — except Emilie Lieberherr of Zurich—said it had not made any noticeable difference in public affairs.

Dr. Lieberherr heads the Zurich city's social welfare department, and she felt that her enthusiasm and concern for women had brought some beneficial measures that would not have been adopted without women in politics. But these affect very practical matters, such as support for unwed mothers and loans against defaulted alimony payments to divorced mothers.

She is a socialist, a vigorous, handsome, enthusiastic woman, and she expounds on the importance of using welfare to "help people help themselves" and of avoiding the risk of encouraging dependence or laziness.

Both Sides Avoid Confrontation

The unions share the national temper. A pact of labor peace has been in existence since 1937, concluded for defense reasons in the face of the coming World War II. Lately, however, there have been some minor wildcat strikes, a subject of widespread concern and uneasiness.

But the Journal de Genève, reporting on the strike of a thousand workers at the Dubied textile machinery company in Neuchâtel, reported that during a meeting with management, "the workers were very dignified."

"They listened silently to the state-labor to fuel the long boom, Switzerland braked the recession by "exporting unemployment." They also acknowledge that the voters, in a bitterly fought referendum, narrowly opposed the expulsion of more foreign workers not because it was palpably unfair and unjust, but because people came to realize it would have wrecked the tourist industry and hurt the economy.

Country Has 4 Official Languages

A number of people in Geneva, Bern and Zurich said that the Swiss heterogeneity, with four official languages and no really national culture, did not open their hearts to outsiders but made them all the more mistrustful and hostile to anyone different, behind the surface courtesies.

"We get along with each other because we have to, but foreigners change the delicate internal balance of language, religion, culture," an editor said.

"This is a nation only by an act of political will," said H. L. Mast, executive vice president of the Credit Suisse, one of the leading banks, and others echoed the thought that there was no inherent reason why Switzerland should be a separate state instead of parts of neighboring states. But the consciousness of what seems to them historical fragility has made the people all the more determined to cling to what exists, and resistant to change.

"The Parliament is more conservative than the Government, and the electorate is more conservative than the Parliament," sighed a Deputy of the Conservative People's Party, a wizened, stringy farmer.

He, like many others, surprisingly asked, "How long can we go on with this direct democracy?" noting that "practically every change proposed is rejected by referendum."

The more united the government, the parties and the press are in support of something new—a tax reform, foreign aid, restrictions on arms sales—the more adamantly the voters repulse it, said François Bondy, a writer.

But then, bankers and politicians who deplored the public suspicion of change and distrust of leadership typically added, usually with a grin of embarrassment, something like this: "Of course, I admit I always vote no if I'm in doubt or don't know the details. We are asked to vote too often, on too many questions, and they are too complicated, too hard for laymen to understand."

"Besides, we don't like leaders, we don't trust people who put themselves out in front," said Hans Baer, the sophisticated, cosmopolitan director of a wealthy banking house, Julius Baer. "If they get too far, we chop them off at the head."

"Yes," said Elizabeth Kopp, who was recently elected mayor of a suburban town near Zurich, and she went on to tell several stories of how the town council had reacted to people who sought to show authority.

Officially, power in Switzerland is the most decentralized, distributed and balanced of any country in the world. The Federal Government has strictly limited powers. Few know the name of the President or recognize him as he goes to work on a streetcar. There is a coalition of all four major parties, and the seven federal councilors are chosen by an intricate formula to assure fair shares of repre-

ment of Mr. de Salis," the account said, referring to the supervisor. "At the request of the strike committee, no questions were put to him."

That kind of labor-management cooperation goes a long way to explain the special strength of the Swiss economy and the society's extraordinary stability. Arnold Issler, secretary of the Swiss Federation of Trade Unions, said: "It's probably only possible because we're such a small country," but it is also obviously more congenial to the careful Swiss temperament than the risk of confrontation.

This infuriates Jean Ziegler, a radical member of Parliament from Geneva and a sociology professor who has written an angry book called "Switzerland Above All Suspicion" that denounces what he calls the country's "secondary imperialism."

"Direct democracy produces direct oligarchy," Mr. Ziegler said, arguing that real power is tightly concentrated in the leadership of the huge Swiss-based multinational companies and the big banks. Others concede readily that there is some truth in what he has written, but they consider him slightly crazy for making such a noise and a nuisance.

It is not clear whether it is something specifically about Switzerland, or something about the system of direct democracy—maximum, immediate and constant participation of the people in all public decisions from the smallest to the largest—that makes the society here so consistently conservative.

Voting Rate Has Been Declining

Reactionary or not, the Swiss are evidently content with their manner of running things. Politicians and public officials are worried about the declining use of the ballot, however. It is rare to achieve more than 50 percent participation in a vote, and 20 or 25 percent is a more normal figure in recent years. But the town meeting is still a lively and popular institution, and it draws crowds.

Social Security is rudimentary and rests on a system of "three pillars": private savings, private insurance programs — though compulsory in some cantons — and state aid, in that order of importance.

But social stability seems to be profoundly rooted, and so is the mistrust of government intervention, innovation, or any invasion of communal, family or individual privacy and independence.

The Banking Secrecy Law, which attracts so much foreign money, was originally instituted in the Nazi period to protect the resources that German Jews managed to smuggle abroad. But now, bankers agree, it is the Swiss electorate that supports the idea on principle, because if it did not, the voters would certainly abolish it.

"It is boring," said François Bondy, an internationalist who has lived many years in other countries. "This country will never produce any great ideas or great achievements because the people don't like or trust anyone who rises above the ordinary. But it is a very agreeable place to live, people are so polite and helpful."

And it is beautiful. "God made no mistake when he gave those breathtaking mountains and glorious valleys and lakes to the Swiss," said Phyllis Hirschfeld, a tourist from New York. "They really take care of it, every inch is tended."

THANK YOU DON SAYRES,
FOR MY BLACK VELVET
NIGHTS.
NOW ALL I NEED
IS ONE SILVER CLOUD.

These nights, most of my little evenings are spent with Don Sayres for Gamut—dining by a window overlooking the world, seeing my friend's new show after it opens. And me, the center of it all, in a trouser turn-out just special-occasion-enough. Black cotton velvet blazer, trousers; white polyester crepe de chine evening shirt. 4 to 12 sizes, $230.

I believe in putting my money where my lifestyle is—into clothes that mix, as only separates can, when they're masterfully planned. My master planner? Don Sayres, for Gamut. I'll meet him Wednesday, September 8, 12 to 4. Designer Coat and Suit Collections, Fifth Floor.

We understand you at

Arab League Decides to Grant Full Voting Membership to P.L.O.

Special to The New York Times
CAIRO, Sept. 6—The Palestine Liberation Organization was granted full voting membership in the Arab League today. Meeting in regular session following Saturday's emergency conference on Lebanon, the league made the organization its 21st member.
The unanimous vote to raise the P.L.O.'s status from that of a nonvoting member to full membership was sponsored by Egypt, which has been trying hard in recent months to bolster its own standing with the Palestinians.
At their last conference in Rabat, Morocco, in 1974, Arab leaders designated the P.L.O. the sole legal representative of the Palestinians. The vote today gives the Palestinians slightly more diplomatic status in the Arab world; the practical effect is not likely to be major.
But with the Palestinians on the defensive in Lebanon, Syria and recently in Kuwait, the vote was welcomed by the P.L.O. "The vote came at a time when some were saying that the Palestinian movement was breathing its last," said Gamal Sourani, chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization office in Cairo.
"This affirms that the contrary is true."
In other developments, the league declined to discuss the dispute between Libya and Egypt and was told that Iraq may yet oppose the agreement reached Saturday for a conference of Arab leaders on Lebanon.
The Arab League asked Libya, in the name of Arab unity, to withdraw a complaint about Egypt's massing of troops on the Libyan-Egyptian border. Libya agreed amid signs that it is trying to ease the tension with Egypt. Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi said in a speech last week he would not sever diplomatic relations with Egypt, as he had threatened, and asked for a meeting with Presidents Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt and Hafiz al-Assad of Syria.

The league's surprise agreement Saturday to hold the conference on Lebanon during the third week of October was threatened as Iraq officially informed the league yesterday that it would not agree to the meeting until Syrian troops left Lebanon. The Iraq statement and others made it appear here that the conference is conditional upon a cooling down of the war.

Parties Backing Makarios Sweep Cyprus Election; 2 of Them Are on the Left

NICOSIA, Cyprus, Sept. 6 (UPI)—An alliance of Communists and two other parties supporting President Makarios won all but one seat in the 35-member Greek Cypriot House of Representatives today.
The 35th seat went to an independent, Tassos Papadopoulos, Greek Cypriot negotiator in efforts to solve the Cyprus problem.
Official results showed that the right-wing opposition Democratic Rally, led by Glafkos Clerides, former Speaker of the House of Representatives, drew up to 30 percent of the vote in the first parliamentary elections since the Turkish invasion in July 1974. But Clerides, an advocate of negotiations with the Turks for a quick settlement of the Cyprus issue, failed to win a single seat because of the representation system and bloc voting for the three-party alliance.
The Democratic front, led by former Foreign Minister Spyros Kyprianou, won 21 seats, the Communist Akel Party 9 and the Socialist Edek Party 4.

Judge Rejects Plea to Step Down In a Police-Abuse Case in Alabama

Special to The New York Times

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 5 — A Federal District Judge has rejected a lawyer's demand that the judge step down because he has shown "personal bias" in a case involving allegations of the most extensive police misconduct in Montgomery in 15 years.

Judge Robert Varner was the latest of a growing number of public officials to be drawn into litigation that arose out of the police killing nearly a year ago of a robbery suspect who, most evidence now indicates, was the wrong man.

Three policemen have been indicted for perjury in connection with the case. The district attorney has removed himself from the prosecution and asked the State Attorney General to take over. And a number of other policemen, including Public Safety Director Ed Wright are being sued in Federal court for more than $5 million on charges that they took part in a cover-up of the suspect's "wrongful and unlawful death."

Delay Is Possible

Both the Federal civil suit and the criminal trials in state court are scheduled to begin in the next four to six weeks, although appeals may require postponements.

The controversy began on Dec. 2, 1975, when the Montgomery police, answering a robbery call, chased Bernard Whitehurst, a 32-year-old black man, into a fenced area and killed him.

Police reports at the time said Mr. Whitehurst had been firing at the officers and that he had been shot in the chest. Shortly after the shooting—one of a series of incidents involving the killing or wounding of suspects by the police—there was a public clamor for the Montgomery City Council to establish a police review board. Divided strictly along racial lines, the Council defeated the review board proposal, 5 to 4. After a grand jury looked into the matter and absolved the police, the case was considered closed.

Account of Police

The police have contended that Mr. Whitehurst was a known heroin user with a record of burglary convictions and that he must have stolen the disputed weapon some time after the police staged the raid in which the pistol was seen, but not confiscated.

Officers have since acknowledged that although only $35 was taken in the robbery before Mr. Whitehurst was killed, more than $300 in cash was found on his body. They have also conceded that the money was returned to his widow, who has since taken her four children to live in a rural county 100 miles from Montgomery.

No charge has been lodged against Patrolman Donald E. Foster, the officer alleged in the civil suit to have fired the fatal shot.

Active Rabbis
Not to Officiate
at Mixed Marriages

N. Sept. 6 (UPI)—Rabbis of the Conservative Jewish movement will not participate in marriages between Jews and non-Jews, but the non-Jewish partner, according to the Rabbinical Assembly, on Jewish Law and Ethics, the organization's official journal, said, "all organizations should discourage such occurrence."
"In spite of all efforts, intermarriage takes place, we believe in the interest of the community as a whole over to Jewish life," the report said.
"There has been an increasing intermarriage in the Jewish community. Some 15 percent of all marriages in the Jewish community are intermarriages being lost to the Jewish community," the report said that the intermarriage might be accepted by a rabbi "provided there is a conversion of the children as Jews and converted mother is non-Jewish."
"It is the duty of the rabbi to give the children a Jewish education and convert them to Judaism," the report said, "intermarriage shall be discouraged."
Rabinowitz, president of the Rabbinical Assembly, while expressing support for intermarriages, said rabbis should make every effort to expose them to Judaism with the hope that they will meet with the couple and persuade them to attend synagogue," the report said, "conversion of the couple is not required."

VIET DIOCESE
BISHOP'S DISMISSAL

Sept. 7 (Reuters)—Church officials in Sverdlovsk have approved the dismissal of Bishop Potter, general secretary of the Council of Churches, in the removal of Bishop Potter from his pastoral duty. The removal of Bishop Potter was announced in a letter signed by 253 priests which was given to the bishop today by Moscow.
Bishop Potter, the head of the Urals industrial region, had been accused of having a number of priests in the city, services and seldom of the cathedral.
Bishop Potter had frequently gone to the cathedral to discuss the matter with the Russian Orthodox bishop, but they had been unable to see him. "Written to him, but their letters did not get through," they said.

Appeal by Church
of Bishop Capucci

Sept. 6 (Reuters)—Israel has rejected an appeal by the Greek Catholic Church to pardon Archbishop Maximus, head of the Greek Catholic Church in Jerusalem, who was sentenced to a 12-year term in 1974 for running guns from Israel to Cyprus.
The ministry sources said that the Greek Catholic Archbishop Maximus had no responsibility in the case of the Greek Catholic Church serving a 12-year jail term.

Executive Out
Lockheed Scandal

Sept. 6 (UPI)—The president of Lockheed, in jail for two days with Japan's Lockheed, was freed today on $100,000 bail.
The 61-year-old, left the Center following a disbarment hearing. He was released after a hearing on the bribery case to be argued with violation of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act and trade control laws. The Lockheed said it spent $100 million on its jetliners in Japan.

Interim Bill
and Tax Cuts

Sept. 6 (UPI)—President Ford today urged Congress to pass a bill to extend the tax reform measures. Mr. Ford said that the nation's attention once again is focused on the need for tax reform. He said that the Congress has a duty to act on the issue of tax reform, he added, "both are necessary."
"I noted he had asked for a bill to extend the tax reform measures in the form of a $10 billion and additional tax cuts," he said. "I also cited his record as the strongest possible support for the tax reform measures in estate and gift taxes and small business taxes."
"In many times, we must act on all taxpayers to make the tax system more equitable," he said.
"I am signing it only a day respite so that the tax reform package can be completed as soon as possible."

Actually, horse chestnut is the closest we can come, even though that doesn't sound like "fashion language." If you collected horse chestnuts when you were 10, and carried them in your pocket for luck, you remember what a rich golden/red/brown glow they began to show.

That's the color. Now in superbly supple calfskin leather, rubbed to a fine (refined) patina. Our buyer says that in shoe biz this is called "antiquing", but one glance at our drawings and you can see there's nothing antique about Mr. Evins' new silhouettes.

You'll wear the sleek low-heeleders with your new fuller, longer skirts and colored stockings.

You'll flaunt David's sophisticated high-steppers with your softly tailored dresses.

Fewer Teacher Strikes Reported But Many Disputes Are Unsettled

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 6 (AP)—The new school year has started with fewer teacher strikes than in 1975, the National Education Association says. But the association warns that more teacher contracts are unsettled this year, which could mean trouble ahead.

A state-by-state survey by the association shows a total so far of 24 teacher strikes in five states involving about 5,000 teachers and 85,000 students. However, most schools do not open until after Labor Day, and a substantial number of strikes are set or predicted later this week.

"While there are fewer early teacher strikes this year, potentially the situation is as serious as last year," said the association's executive director, Terry Herndon.

"Tight money and all of the factors which led to a record number of teacher strikes for the 1975-76 school year are the same," he added. "And the incredible number of unsettled contracts—some 2,200—could result in more strikes later if settlement is not reached."

In the 1975-76 school year, there were 203 teacher strikes. Mr. Herndon said that teachers would walk out if they believed that school boards were trying to use economic woes as "a cover to ride roughshod over them."

Wage settlements so far have averaged 6 to 8 percent, the association said.

The major issues in dispute are wages, job security, student disciplinary procedures, class size and board efforts to roll back gains won by teachers in recent years, the association said.

Teachers in Seattle and Tacoma, Wash., were scheduled to take strike votes today. And unless bargaining over the Labor Day weekend resulted in settlements, teachers in a number of smaller areas set strike deadlines this week. Included are five school districts in Oregon, one in Bedford County, Tenn., and two in Rhode Island.

The heaviest strike activity is in Pennsylvania, where 11 walkouts have occurred. Four have taken place in Illinois and one in Indiana.

Striking teachers have returned to work after reaching settlement or under court injunction, in eight communities—one in Idaho, two in Kentucky, one in Pennsylvania and four in Illinois.

Club Can't Find Time For a 'Be Late' Event

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6 (UPI)—The Procrastinators Club of America celebrated its "Be Late for Something Day" by putting it off until next year.

The national club's 3,000 members were supposed to hold the celebration yesterday in Philadelphia.

Les Waas, president of the 20-year-old organization, said he intended to mark the day by "doing nothing, but I didn't get around to it."

"We try to hold 'Be Late for Something Day' each year to promote it so people will get the idea they can be late for something," Mr. Waas said. "We want them to appreciate the art of procrastination."

Hurricane Stalled Over Ocean

MIAMI, Sept. 6 (UPI)—Hurricane Frances, with top winds still at 75 miles an hour, stalled in the North Atlantic today, 350 miles north of the Azores. Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center said that the storm was expected to lose its remaining tropical characteristics in the colder northern waters of the ocean.

Key Foresees the Routine Use of Artificial Hearts in a Few Years

Sept. 6—Dr. Michael E. DeBakey, heart-transplant pioneer, believes that the fairly short span of years in which artificial hearts will be routinely implanted is not promising than transplant hearts, the Houston surgeon said in an interview with The New York Times. He said that the long-term research must still be done to cure the diseases that degenerate other organs.

Longest-Lived Recipient
Dr. DeBakey's longest-lived heart-transplant patient, a Yugoslav citizen, died last year, six years after receiving a donor heart. He was one of the longest-lived transplant beneficiaries since the operation was first performed in 1967 by Dr. Christian N. Barnard in South Africa. "Within our lifetimes" implanted artificial human hearts will be a reality, Dr. DeBakey said. The two main difficulties in transplanting natural hearts are the finding of donors and circumventing the rejection mechanism of the recipient.

He also chided those, some scientists among them, who have sought to suppress "genetic engineering" research with prohibitive legal measures, opponents of such research argue that through laboratory-induced mutations, dangerous monsters might come into being, especially lethal microbes immune to all normal human defenses.

New Orleans Police Conduct a Sick-out To Protest Pay Cut

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 6 (AP)—Community relations and police academy officers manned squad cars today after 60 percent of the city's patrol force staged a Labor Day sick-out to protest holiday pay cuts.

vote for the job action Friday. But yesterday, 125 officers were absent from work. "I think we've made our point," said the union's president, Vincent Bruno. He said that officers objected to a city Civil Service Commission ruling that, in effect, reduced holiday pay from two and a half times the normal wage to double the normal wage.

With Money on the Line, Coast Skateboards Roll

LONG BEACH, Calif., Sept. 6—The sparsely filled seats of the Long Beach Arena, with its makeshift plywood hill, didn't look like "never-never land." In fact, the main floor of the arena, which had been roped off with plastic blue and white flags, looked rather amateurish for what was billed as the World Professional Skateboard Championship this past weekend in Long Beach.

It certainly was the first time anyone had put up $20,000 in prize money for a skateboarding contest. For 24-year-old Skitch Hitchcock of Laguna Niguel, Calif., it was a dream come true.

Mr. Hitchcock was addicted to skateboarding as a youngster during the first skateboarding craze in the 60's and never stopped. The early skateboards were wobbly boards with steel wheels which would barely traverse the common sidewalk.

Old Skateboards Recalled
Improvements came slowly and that is probably why the fad died off for nearly 10 years before its recent rejuvenation. Mr. Hitchcock, who was skating every day then, remembered the short boards with the composite clay wheels. There were no sponsors in those days, he recalled. "I was turning out clay wheels once every three days; it got to be pretty expensive; it was costing me about $10 bucks a week."

But the skateboard fad has surged recently with the development of wheels made from tough polyurethane and boards of fiberglass. So two years ago Mr. Hitchcock turned professional and signed a contract to "ride" for a major manufacturer of the new boards.

The new skateboards can be raced down hills at 60 miles an hour and ridden down the walls of giant drainage pipes. With a second lease on life, the skateboard companies are sending "teams" on nationwide tours to push skateboarding as the new family sport.

Part of the Leisure Cult
Now skateboarding has joined surfing and rock music as part of the youth leisure cult in California. So it is not surprising that a rock concert producer should be promoting a skateboarding championship. Steve Wolf of Wolf and Rissmiller Concerts first became aware of the skateboarding craze when trying to book rock concerts at West Coast arenas only to find the dates taken up by surfing and skateboarding movies. Research into the attendance figures at those movies eventually convinced the producers that skateboarding was a booming business and needed organizing.

Hoping to eventually promote a series of these events, Wolf and Rissmiller found a sponsor for the $20,000 prize money and then, the concert company said, it invested between $50,000 to $60,000 of its own money to advertise and organize the first World Professional Skate Board championship, held this past weekend. To add flavor to the event, the $3 admission ticket included a free rock concert each night.

Impetus From Manufacturers
The biggest impetus for establishing skateboarding as a sport comes from the skate board manufacturers, who sign the skateboarders—some to contracts of up to $30,000—and send them around the country to give skateboard demonstrations, on local TV programs and at rock concerts.

Rick Smith, who put up the $20,000 prize money for the latest skateboard championship, does not think that sponsoring a skateboarding championship at $20,000 a crack or paying between $20,000 and $30,000 for a top skater to endorse, advertise and promote his skate boards is unreasonable. He said that his company had sold $6 million worth of skate boards in the last 10 months.

Russ "Grandpa" Howell, a 27-year-old physical education major from California State University at Long Beach, has chosen to remain unsigned prior to the championship because one of the meet's main functions was to provide commercial opportunities and endorsements for particular manufacturers. Given the endorsements for particular skateboard products, the winner of the meet could get up to $50,000 on his signature alone.

Long Island Competitor
"The thing is in competition they could be giving away lollipops at this meet and it would have the same importance as if they were giving away thousands and thousand of dollars," Mr. Howell said between signing autographs.

One of the competing skateboarders was John "Woody" Woodstock of Oyster Bay, L.I. He paid his own way out to California to find out what the competition was going to be like, and whether he could become a professional skateboarder. He found the competition much tougher than back East, but he placed in the first five in the barrel jump by hurtling 16 barrels on his board.

A contestant in what was billed as the World Professional Skateboard Championship preparing to start in the slalom event in Long Beach, Calif.

Mr. Woodstock, an 18-year-old blond, looked much like his West Coast counterparts except for a heavy New York accent. He said that the problem with skateboarding in the Eastern cities was that it was mainly done in the streets.

For Skitch Hitchcock, the weekend meet could have lasted forever. As he signed an autograph for a 15-year-old groupie, Mr. Hitchcock said, "My surfing friends got married 20 years ago and they aren't kids anymore. You get married and you can't skateboard. I got to be a kid forever, Peter Pan."

Something for smokers to think about.

There are cigarettes and there are cigarettes. And if you're a smoker you certainly know by now which brand you really enjoy smoking. So what makes us think we'll ever get a crack at switching you? Well, we're going to try. A lot of cigarette smokers smoke menthol. But they're probably just as concerned about the 'tar' and nicotine stories that all cigarette smokers have been hearing these days. Frankly, if a cigarette is going to bring you flavor, it's also going to bring you smoke. And where there's smoke, there has to be 'tar'. In fact, in most cigarette, the more flavor, the more 'tar'. Except for Vantage. You must know that Vantage cigarettes have a special filter which reduces 'tar' and nicotine without destroying flavor. What you may not know is that Vantage is also available in menthol. Not surprisingly, what separates Vantage Menthol from ordinary menthols is that Vantage Menthol gives you all the flavor you want, with a lot less of the 'tar' and the nicotine that you probably don't want. Now Vantage Menthol is not the lowest 'tar' and nicotine menthol you'll find. It may well be the lowest one you'll enjoy smoking. Since you're the best judge of what you like about menthol cigarettes, don't just take our word for it. Try a pack of Vantage Menthol and then you'll know for sure.

RECORD BY BUCKLEY

Those in Control for Irresponsibility Economic Program

L. Buckley in a campaign yesterday, blamed the country's economic problems on the "job-destroying, job-creating" Conservative-Republican program for re-election to Congress, proposed in a Labor Day message he called a "real jobs program."

Buckley would allow corporations to deduct the dividends they pay as a business expense, to deduct accounts and on the same securities sales and taxes, based on the Commission to compute corporate taxes.

Five States Vote Today to Pick Party Congressional Candidates

By The Associated Press

Five states will hold Congressional primaries tomorrow with few surprises expected, and North Dakota will hold a gubernatorial primary.

The race attracting the most attention involves Representative Robert L. F. Sikes, a Florida Democrat recently reprimanded by the House for failing to disclose a possible conflict in interest involving financial dealings and his chairmanship of the Military Construction Appropriations subcommittee. He faces a challenge from John Benton Jr. of Panama City. Mr. Benton, 28 years old, resigned from the Commerce Department to enter the race.

In Arizona, Representative Morris K. Udall, who lost his contest for the Democratic Presidential nomination to Jimmy Carter, has opposition in his re-nomination bid, but party professionals expect him to win. His opponent, Ruben Romero, a Tucson city councilman, says, "I think it's time we gave Democrats a choice."

Republicans and Democrats in Arizona are also holding primaries to select nominees for the Senate seat of Paul Fannin, who is retiring. Representatives Sam Steiger, 47, and John Conlan, 46, are seeking the Republican nomination. In the Democratic Senate primary, Carolyn Warner, 46, the state education superintendent; Dennis DeConcini, 39, and the former state Attorney General, Wade Church, 68, are running for the nomination. Mr. Steiger and Mr. Conlan are conservatives in the Barry Goldwater tradition. Mr. Conlan says Mr. Steiger has a closet full of skeletons that would make easy pickings for the Democrats in November. But Mr. Steiger has the endorsement of Senator Goldwater, who accused Mr. Conlan of inserting anti-Semitism into the campaign. Mr. Steiger is Jewish and Mr. Goldwater, an Episcopalian, is a Jewish descendant.

The House minority leader, John A. Rhodes, of the First District faces a weak challenge from Louis Stradling, 59, a fellow Mesa, Ariz., resident. Pat Fullinwider, housewife in Tempe, Ariz., is running unopposed for the Democratic nomination, which she won in 1974. Mrs. Fullinwider received 43 percent of the vote against Mr. Rhodes in the 1974 general election.

In Connecticut, there is only one contested Congressional primary. That is in the Fourth District, where the party convention nominee, Charles B. Tisdale of Bridgeport, is being challenged by Geoffrey D. Peterson of Westport.

Mr. Tisdale, 43, former chief of Bridgeport's anti-poverty agency and a black, has been accused by Mr. Peterson of being part of the old Democratic political machine of power blocs and party bosses. Mr. Peterson, 30, is a former aide to Senator Abraham Ribicoff.

In Nevada, Senator Howard W. Cannon is expected to defeat his two challengers for re-nomination, C. Hardison Cundiff of Las Vegas and Rowena von Wolff of Fernley. Three Republicans are seeking their party's nomination. They are David Towell of Minden, Sac Cavar and Robert Charles, both of Las Vegas.

In North Dakota's gubernatorial primaries, Richard Eldin, Public Service Commission president, is favored to defeat independent Herb Geving for the Republican nomination. Gov. Arthur A. Link, a Democrat, is unopposed.

The state's one representative, Mark Andrews, is unopposed for the Republican nomination. Lloyd Omdahl is opposed by Torfin A. Teigen for the Democratic nomination.

Flat-Topped Hills on the Mars—Also Looks Closely at Nearby Rocks

ALTON SULLIVAN
 The New York Times

Contrasting Symbols in Campaign

political community. Even the most partisan Democrats, however, were prepared to concede that things could go wrong for the tenacious and highly organized Georgian.

The three televised debates between the rivals (there will be a fourth between the Vice-Presidential nominees) appeared to many political professionals to offer the President his best chance to catch up. If he is a mediocre campaigner, as he himself has admitted in recent interviews, he has spent a career amassing detailed information on policy questions that could serve him well in the debates.

Like a football coach discounting the importance of a pivotal game, Mr. Carter said yesterday that he would be happy to emerge from the confrontations with a "tie."

Second, Mr. Carter could be hurt in the populous belt of states stretching from Illinois and Wisconsin in the West to Massachusetts in the East, by the seeming aversion of traditionally Democratic Roman Catholic voters in that area to a Democrat who is both Southern and a devout Baptist.

The Ford strategists believe that those voters hold the key to the outcome of the election and that they are available to the President. But so far they do not seem to have evolved a clear plan for persuading them to defect.

Third, Mr. Carter could be severely wounded if the electorate as a whole decides—as did the Democratic electorate in some of the late primary states—that he is "fuzzy" and "shifts" on the issues. The Georgian's own pollster, Patrick Caddell, said this weekend that Mr. Carter would have to be extremely careful not to convey that impression.

Foreign Flareup Could Aid Ford

Finally, the President could benefit enormously from some unforeseen event abroad that would cause the country to rally around him as Commander-in-Chief. A serious flareup in Korea is one obvious possibility; equally damaging to Mr. Carter could be war in the Middle East or an open conflict in southern Africa in which the United States became involved.

Some Democrats predict that Mr. Ford, seeking to underline his greater experience in foreign affairs, will propose a summit meeting with the Soviet leadership before the election. But that would probably have less impact on the voting than an event over which neither candidate had any control.

Mr. Ford's strategy is that of a gambler—a strategy forced upon an ordinarily rather cautious man by the weakness of his position. The debates are one element. Concentration on the big states is another. And the President's decision to delay the opening of his campaign until next week in Ann Arbor, Mich.—with intensive activity restricted until the final two weeks is still another.

Curiously, Mr. Ford is taking exactly the opposite approach to that used by the last incumbent who found himself in such trouble, Mr. Truman. Although the President likes to identify himself with the Missouri Democrat, Mr. Truman was anything but "Presidential," campaigning furiously in a slam-bang partisan style in his upset of Thomas E. Dewey in 1948.

Front-Runner Approach

Mr. Carter's approach is that of the front-runner, following a moderate course in an effort to offend as few people as possible, making an effort in all parts of the nation.

Each man will try to channel resources into those states where his chances seem best, hoping to assemble the 270 electoral votes needed to win. But unless Mr. Ford can narrow the national gap that now separates the two candidates, regional variations in voting will help him little.

Studies of Presidential voting in the last decade indicate that few states vary more than 12 percentage points from the national result. If the polls as they now stand were to be reflected in the final outcome, therefore, Mr. Ford could not hope to carry more than a half-dozen states—Nebraska and Kansas, perhaps, and some border states.

Why wait up to 90 days to earn 5 1/4% interest

In 90 days, County Federal can pay you 5 3/4%!

County Federal Savings and Loan pays interest on your savings every month — on all accounts, passbook or savings certificate. So you never have to wait up to 90 days to enjoy the interest you've earned.

If you now have a passbook account that requires you to wait till the end of a quarter, County Federal suggests you consider the advantages of a County Federal 90-day Savings Certificate. You can earn 5 3/4% interest on your savings instead of the 5 1/4% (or perhaps 5%) you now receive. You don't have to tie your money up for a long period of time, because your funds are available to you without any interest penalty every 90 days. (Renewal of your certificate can be made automatic, subject to your approval.)

With a County Federal 90-day Certificate, your savings not only earn a higher rate but your interest is compounded daily. And you can draw your interest every month — or leave it in your account to earn more interest. If your savings and interest remain in your account a full year, your effective annual yield is actually 6%!

Increase the interest you now get every quarter with a County Federal 90-day Savings Certificate. Minimum deposit — $500.

NOTE: Government regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawals from Time Savings Accounts. Interest on the amount withdrawn may not exceed the passbook rate, and interest for 90 days is forfeited.

3 times a day, every day, TWA flies non-stop to San Francisco with the most comfortable planes going, including the widebody 1011 and 747. TWA also offers a Night Coach one-stop that will save you 20% off the cost of airfare. Convenience, comfort and economy—TWA has it all.

The widest choice of meals.

On all our non-stop flights to San Francisco you'll have your choice of meals prepared under the supervision of Dieter Buehler, TWA's Dining Director and 1976 winner of the Gold Plate Award for outstanding food service. It's the first time this prestigious award has been given to someone from an airline.

The best on-time record.

No matter when you plan to fly, one thing's for sure—the best time is on time. No other airline can match TWA's on-time performance record between New York and San Francisco. It's based on statistics reported to the CAB of the percentage of flights actually flown arriving on time, or within 15 minutes of schedule, for 18 months through June 1976.

Getting the best isn't everything. It's the only thing.

Ford Record on His 5 Major Domestic Issues Examined

By DAVID E. ROSENBAUM
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6—At a news conference in Vail, Colo., last month, President Ford announced that he and his campaign advisers had "refined the areas that we think important for this campaign to emphasize."

Mr. Ford then pointed to five domestic issues: jobs, housing, health, crime and recreation.

What follows is an examination of Mr. Ford's public record in those five fields.

Jobs

Mr. Ford said his campaign would stress the need for "jobs, meaningful jobs, with an opportunity for advancement." The pivotal word in that statement appears to be meaningful.

The unemployment rate in the Ford administration has been the highest since the Depression. From a peak of 9.2 percent in May 1975, the rate fell to 7.3 percent in May 1976. Since then, it has risen slightly month by month to 7.9 percent last month. Unemployment among certain segments of the population, such as blacks is considerably greater.

Mr. Ford's philosophy and that of his Administration has been to concentrate on reducing the rate of inflation, an effort in which he has been rather successful, under the theory that unemployment is a byproduct of excessive inflation.

"My first objective," he said in his State of the Union message in January, "is to have sound economic growth without inflation."

Mr. Ford has repeatedly vetoed legislation passed by the Democratic Congress that would put the unemployed to work on the Government payroll. Finally, this summer, Congress enacted such a measure by overriding a veto.

"Short-term public employment programs often postpone the real solution to the unemployment problem," Mr. Ford has said. His economic policies, he declared in a veto message in July,

"are expected to produce lasting, productive jobs, not temporary jobs paid for by the American taxpayer."

In the last 18 months, the number of workers in the private sector has risen by 3.5 million. Economists disagree about how much of that increase can be attributed to Mr. Ford's policies of trying to stimulate business. The rate of increase in employment in the private sector is on par or slightly higher than that of previous economic recoveries.

Housing

The President said in Vail that he would emphasize "an accelerated home ownership program." He said home ownership was "something more Americans are more interested in today than almost anything as we look at the polls that have been taken and the surveys that have been made."

Experts in the housing field were surprised by Mr. Ford's focus on home ownership, since the policy of his Administration has been to concentrate on helping the poor get existing rental housing.

Last year, Mr. Ford vetoed legislation that would have subsidized the mortgage interest paid by home buyers so that the buyers would not have had to pay a rate of more than 6 percent. Subsequently, he agreed to a measure, developed in Congress, that set the subsidy level at about 8 percent and offered Government loans to help unemployed persons threatened with foreclosure to meet their mortgage payments.

Recent nonpartisan studies by recognized experts have concluded that an insignificant number of people who would not otherwise have bought homes took advantage of the mortgage subsidy program.

Health

The President said at his news conference that his campaign would emphasize "quality health care that is affordable to the American people."

"We have to keep pressure on the costs of health care and make sure the quality of health care they are getting today will be continued and expanded," he said.

Mr. Ford has opposed establishment of a national health insurance system. In his State of the Union address, he declared: "We cannot realistically afford federally dictated national health insurance providing full coverage for all 215 million Americans. The experience of other countries raises questions about the quality as well as the cost of such plans."

Mr. Ford proposed this year a program that would protect persons eligible for Medicare from the financial burden of catastrophic illness. Under the plan, persons covered by Medicare would pay somewhat more than they now pay for short-term care by doctors and in hospitals, but they would have to pay no more than $500 a year for hospitalization and no more than $250 in doctors' bills.

Fought by Congress

The plan would affect only 3 million of the 25 million people eligible for Medicare. Because most Medicare recipients would have to pay more, the proposal met with strong opposition in Congress and was not pressed by the Administration.

To limit the rise in health costs, Mr. Ford proposed limiting the increase in Federal reimbursements for Medicare to 7 percent a year for hospitals and 4 percent for doctors' services. That proposal also was not pressed by the Administration and was not enacted by Congress.

In 1965, Mr. Ford, a member of Congress, voted against the legislation that established Medicare.

Crime

In Vail, Mr. Ford said he would "not tolerate the kind of crime rate increases that have taken place over the last three or four years." He said he and his advisers had "some new thoughts and ideas that will be announced in the campaign."

There are two areas in which the Federal Government can have some impact: providing money and services to local police departments and stemming drug traffic.

The Ford budget for the next fiscal year proposes a reduction of 12 percent in grants to states and communities by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, the principal Federal agency helping local law-enforcement agencies.

Mr. Ford has proposed mandatory sentences for persons convicted of drug trafficking and airplane hijacking, crimes committed with guns and various offenses by repeat offenders. He favors the death penalty for murder, sabotage, espionage and treason. He has said that he believes that "certainty of punishment prevents crime."

Mr. Ford, in a special crime message last year, proposed paying up to $50,000 to victims of injuries inflicted by criminals.

Recreation

Mr. Ford's principal statement on improving recreational areas was made last weekend at Yellowstone National Park. He outlined what he called a "Bicentennial Land Heritage Act" for early submission to Congress.

He said it would call for the expenditure of $700 million in the next decade on existing and new park facilities, $459 million for salaries including 1,500 additional park workers, $200 million for new urban parks and $141 million for acquisition of new parklands and wildlife refuges.

A bill considerably more ambitious than the President's has been approved by a Congressional conference committee and is near enactment. It would authorize $1 billion over the next three years and $3 billion over the next 10 years. There is some doubt in Congress about whether Mr. Ford will sign the measure.

In both of the budgets he has submitted, Mr. Ford has sought somewhat less money than requested by the National Park Service.

Warm Springs: A Taste

Traffic in Warm Springs, Ga., as visitors arrived to hear Jimmy Carter

While Mr. Carter's amplified voice came drawing through the thick stand of pines, elms and oaks from a mile and a half away, Warm Springs enjoyed as zesty and profitable a morning as it has had in a long time. "Nothing like this since Mr. Kennedy came to town," Inez Hancock said. "I saw him right down there, sitting in that convertible of his, driving right on out to the President's house." The 83-year-old widow and retired postal worker scuffed her feet on the porch of her little house and stopped the back-and-forth motion of her green metal glider. "I said right then that he ought not to ride in convertibles," she said. "I told my husband that day he oughtn't do that." The scrape of metal on metal began again, rhythmically punctuating the words of Mr. Carter, who was concluding his oration in the distance. "You want to go down and watch him leave?" her friend, Mrs. Harold Crowder asked. "Well I don't believe so," said Mrs. Hancock. "Once you've seen the best, it just isn't quite as exciting." Then, Mr. Carter swept out the long drive from Mr. Roosevelt's house and headed down the highway toward Columbus, leaving behind a village that he had rescued, at least for the moment, from the ravages of its present. Slowly, the cars began to pull out of the parking lot of Fowler's Motel where, last night, there wasn't an empty room. There are plenty of vacancies at Fowler's tonight.

Mondale Accuses Administration
Of 'Mismanagement' of Economy

By LINDA CHARLTON
Special to The New York Times

BARBERTON, Ohio, Sept. 6—Senator Walter F. Mondale today charged the Ford Administration with "economic mismanagement" as he moved west across the country in a Labor Day marathon campaign that began when he shook hands with airport workers—and, in a definite break with tradition, shook the leg of one man—before leaving Washington. At Washington's National Airport, before taking off at 8 A.M. in his chartered jet for Ohio, Missouri and California, Mr. Mondale greeted airport workers ranging from policemen to cart-rental attendants and from air-traffic controllers to machinists. "I wanted to thank some of the people who work on Labor Day," he told a group of machinists. "If there's only one plane you can watch, watch mine," he said jokingly to a cluster of air-traffic controllers. And he went out onto a runway in pursuit of hands—and votes—and even into the steel belly of a parked Boeing 727. Shakes a Leg
Stooping to get under the plane, Mr. Mondale poked his head and shoulders up through the open cargo-hold to greet a man working inside. As he emerged, he shook a workman's green-trousered leg that was dangling down from the hold. The Democratic Vice-Presidential nominee's first stop was in this small industrial city of about 35,000 just outside Akron. Bartherton's Labor Day parade, set up by the Joint Labor League, is one of Ohio's noted labor celebrations and usually draws a full complement of politicians. Today was no exception. In addition to Mr. Mondale, who rode with his wife, Joan, and their eldest son, Teddy, 18 years old, in a 1925 Packard Phaeton, the parade's participants included the state's senators, John Glenn, a Democrat, and Robert A. Taft, a Republican, who is seeking re-election. Both Mr. Taft and his Democratic opponent, Howard Metzgenbaum, were on the platform at Lake Anna Park to hear Mr. Mondale attack the Ford Administration. He told his friendly blue-collar audience that working people had been "betrayed by economic mismanagement" over the last eight years and he praised the virtues of hard work and his audience. Makes a Pledge
To work is American, Mr. Mondale declared, and "to be able to work and refuse to work is, in my opinion, un-American." There is, he said, "nothing more indispensable" to the United States than the "millions of decent, able-bodied Americans who work, who pay their taxes and who stay off welfare." He told the gathering that "the reason I'm Democrat is that the heart of the Democratic Party and the heart of the working man is the same." Mr. Mondale said that there is "nothing more important than a policy that puts people back to work" and pledged: "We're going to put people back to work, with reasonable interest rates, so we can work and producing the things the American people need."

The magnificent
Mercedes-Benz 450SEL:
It's a world unto itself.

With its price of more than $22,000, it's reasonable to expect that everyone—driver and each and every passenger—should enjoy every moment spent in the Mercedes-Benz 450SEL. Everyone does. Because within its artfully sculpted contours, the 450SEL conceals an extraordinary array of creature comforts. Yet here is one car that appeals as strongly to the intellect as it does to the senses. Read on. Some surprises may be in order. The Mercedes-Benz 450SEL is the contemporary version of the classic touring car. The automotive embodiment of elegance. To be sure, it is a driver's automobile, replete with dozens of stunning engineering developments. Most of them are unique to the 450SEL. But the 450SEL is also a passenger's automobile, in which a host of biotechnological ideas have been beautifully translated into human terms. The result is pleasure—pure pleasure, whether you take the wheel or simply enjoy the ride. Appeals to the senses
You enter the Mercedes-Benz 450SEL through doors, front or rear, that open a full 36 inches wide. Close the doors and you're wrapped in a sure, secure and satisfyingly luxurious environment. You savor satiny, premium leather—or, if it's more to your taste, rich velour. You settle into wide, anatomically correct seats, firmly sprung, whose individual suspension is actually tuned to the car's own suspension. You notice that all interior surfaces are padded and finished for safety as well as amp-tuousness. You defy the elements with a climate control system designed to automatically maintain the precise temperature you prefer at any setting between 65° to 85°. The system also defogs, de-frosts, and dehumidifies. Eleven strategically placed and adjustable vents—and front doors that actually "breathe"—assure proper ventilation in every area of the car. You observe the world outside through an expanse of tinted glass. If you are a passenger, unobtrusively sited rear reading lamps let you read or work at night without interfering with the driver's vision. Adjustable stereo speakers bathe you in sound at the touch of a switch. You cruise even the roughest roads with confidence, the result of the 450SEL's synergistic combination of independent suspension, 116.7-inch wheel-base and welded—not bolted—monocoque construction. As you ride, you appreciate why 450SEL's must be assembled at so slow a rate. Time is lavished on hundreds of individual hand operations. Human touches, loving attention to detail that makes the 450SEL an automobile few—if any—automobiles in the world can even hope to match. Appeals to the intellect
The 450SEL comes to you with a complement of safety, performance and comfort features—as standard equipment—that is almost unheard of these days. Your Dealer can give you the details.

The 450SEL is a sensibly complete car. It's fully equipped right from the start, and priced to reflect its essential honesty. What few items of optional equipment you might consider adding have more to do with your own sense of aesthetics, rather than engineering. Even so, the list is startlingly short. It includes such ultra-refined touches as an electric sunroof, heated seats, light-alloy wheels or rear-seat headrests. Mercedes-Benz has achieved an unparalleled record in this vital test: Based on the average official used car prices over the past five years alone, Mercedes-Benz holds its value better than any other make of luxury car sold in America. Any other make. Given the extraordinary attributes of the 450SEL, it seems only logical that this car should enjoy remarkable resale value indeed.

HANDLING: A Mercedes-Benz sports for decades, brought to a new standard of excellence in the 450SEL Touring Sedan.

COMFORT: In engineering, interior dimensions, quality of materials and craftsmanship the 450SEL offers superb comfort for all its passengers.

SAFETY: Over fifty separate safety elements and systems are combined in the 450SEL.

Water Registration Called Key to Increase of 15 Million in Turnout

WATER
 Two political scientists reported that registration laws, which vary widely from state to state, depress voter turnout. By how much, however, has never been certain.

The two political scientists, Steven J. Rosenstone and Raymond E. Wolfinger of the University of California, reported their estimates yesterday to the convention of the American Political Science Association, which has drawn more than 3,500 scholars to the Palmer House hotel here.

Postcard Registration
 The study, based on more than 90,000 interviews conducted by the Census Bureau in all 50 states after the 1972 Presidential election, results from a debate in Congress over a measure to mandate nationwide registration by postcard. The House has passed the bill, but the California scholars said it would have little effect unless the Government mailed the postcards to every household. Such a provision has been killed.

Other impediments to registration that were found to influence turnout were long residency requirements, irregular registration hours, the periodic purging of nonvoters from the rolls, inconvenient location of registrar offices and the lack of absentee registration in some states.

Effect on This Year
 Since these conclusions are based on 1972 data, gathered long before the Watergate episode fully erupted, it is impossible to determine if other factors would further depress turnout this year. Many surveys report an unusual level of voters' disaffection this year.

It is one of the profound mysteries of American political behavior that voter turnout has been steadily declining from a peak of 63 percent in 1960 even though poll taxes, literacy tests and other major barriers to voting have been swept away by law. Four years ago, only 55.4 percent of eligible citizens voted.

The Berkeley scholars acknowledge this, saying in a paper distributed at the convention, that "other aspects of the political environment clearly are at work."

However, they went on, this "should not distract us from the finding that registration laws have a substantial effect on the percentage of the population that goes to the polls on Election Day."

They contended that a 10 percent increase in turnout could be had by "relatively minor tampering with the laws" and that a European type of registration system, in which the government takes the initiative, would raise turnout "substantially" more.

Retirement money.

Start with as little as $100. You'll get East River's highest interest rate plus special tax advantages. You'll retire richer than you ever dreamed possible.

I Have No Pension Plan.
 When you work, you can open an East River account and deposit, as a tax-savings deduction, up to $1,500 each year (maximum $1,500 each person, or $3,000 for an eligible, employed couple). Both the money you deposit and the high annual interest earned are tax-free. When you retire, your tax bracket is likely to be lower.

High Interest With Minimum Deposit.
 Your retirement money account immediately. A $100 deposit now with as little as $100 and begin earning East River's annual yield of 8.17% which is 7.75% a year plus a 0.42% daily. And you can make deposits of $100 or more during the year up to the maximum of $1,500 for each year. To qualify for this high rate, the money is required to be deposited in a savings certificate for a minimum of 7 years. Other savings plans with shorter terms are also available. However, interest rates and minimum requirements vary with these alternative plans.

Combination IRA with Savings Bank Life Retirement Income Policy.
 East River has a special plan that combines Savings Bank Life with a high interest savings plan. This plan provides death benefits in the event of your death or annuity payments in your retirement years, starting at age 60, guaranteed for life! The insurance feature is optional. Full details are available at any branch or call Alice Lyons at 374-4594.

East River Interest Is What Makes You Rich.
 As shown in the table below, it's East River's high interest that changes modest savings into accumulated wealth. At $1,500 a year for 40 years, your contribution will amount to $60,000. But East River adds over $380,000 in interest, for a retirement total of more than $440,000 provided principal and interest remain in your IRA account until that time.

Recently Retired Or Changed Jobs.
 If you're changing jobs or retiring and receiving a distribution from a qualified pension or profit sharing plan, you can "roll over" these proceeds within 60 days into an East River IRA plan and avoid paying any current income taxes on the distribution.

Plan II - You Are Self-Employed.
 East River has a special Self-Employed Money retirement plan (Keogh) with newly increased tax benefits that allows you to deposit up to 15% of annual income (maximum $7,500 per year). Call or mail coupon for details.

Note: If you already have money maturing in a present IRA retirement plan that has not displayed the performance you anticipated, check our available high-yielding, guaranteed savings plans and compare.

Use the coupon to obtain more details or call (212) 374-4561. Or visit or call any of East River's 12 offices listed below for assistance in setting up your Individual Retirement or Keogh account now!

East River's IRA Helps You To Retire Richer At Age 65.

Initial Amount on Deposit, Tax Free	Tax Free Interest Earned At East River	Total Savings	Cumulative Tax Savings
$60,000	$380,044	$440,044	$162,904
52,500	238,141	290,641	107,595

22,500	22,157	44,657	16,532
7,500	2,052	9,552	3,536

Table amounts are based on maximum $1,500 annual contributions and on a constant interest rate of 7.75% compounded daily for an annual return of 8.17% available on our 6 to 7 year Savings Certificates with a normal minimum deposit of $1,000 and a federal tax bracket of 20%. The funds must be left on deposit for that time to obtain this rate. Available future rates may be more or less than present rates, depending on economic conditions and government regulations.

Premiums for Savings Certificate funds can be made only with the consent of the Bank. FDIC regulations provide that the rate of interest on the amount withdrawn be reduced to the passbook rate at the time of withdrawal from the date of deposit and 90 days interest be forfeited. Interest alone may be withdrawn without FDIC penalty. There is, however, a tax liability and penalty imposed by the IRS if withdrawals are made from the plan before age 59½. You must, however, start withdrawing the money from the account by age 72½ and no further contributions can be made thereafter.

NOTE: These amounts do not include your Social Security benefits.

Fashion: Getting Into the Spirit of '76

By BERNADINE MORRIS

The peasant look
Even before Saint Laurent's sensational couture showing, American designers were adapting the peasant look he showed in his April ready-to-wear collection. It usually involves a shirt, a skirt and a vest. If it has braid embroidery, like this one by Victor Joris for Cuddlecoat, so much the better.

The poncho, stole or blanket
Alternative to the coat, it's tossed, draped or wrapped over anything, day or night. It must be voluminous and it takes a bit of practice before it can be handled gracefully. Richard Assatly at Gino-Snow tossed this gray flannel one over a pants suit.

The loose, slithery shape
That means much of what Mary McFadden does. She's a designer with a rather exotic point of view, and is the favorite of women who know what's going on. She specializes in loose shapes, such as this tunic dress with one arm bare, one covered by a bloused sleeve.

The tunic for evening
It can cover a skirt or pants. It can be in chiffon, crepe, satin or even wool jersey. It must fit loosely. Often it has a hood that drops to become a cowl. If it has a hand-painted design like this one by Blass, it's really au courant.

The duffle coat
One of the discoveries by designers this year, the duffle coat, practical but dormant for years. Christian Dior did it best in Paris. Bill Haire is one of its advocates here in his collection for Friedricks. A hood is essential, even if the sweater underneath has one.

The skewed V neckline
What would fashion be without status? Anything by Halston qualifies, but for fall he's taken a firm stand. Many of his evening dresses are cut with an off-center V neckline. Elizabeth Taylor has already worn hers. It may be as big a thing as Ultrasuede.

Pants in new shapes
Pants were once standardized, flared or straight-legged. Now they're as diversified as skirts. Bloused is an important category, as illustrated by these bearing Geoffrey Beene's label. They're often called parachute pants; for evening, they're called harem pants.

For Adolescents, Pediatrician's Voice Is Changing

By GEORGIA DULEA

Sharon has outgrown her pediatrician. "I won't go back to Dr. Gordon even if I'm dying," she vows. Sharon is 13 years old and in the best of health. So where does she go? A common choice is the office of the general practitioner or the family practitioner where 70 percent of the country's 40 million adolescents are treated. In recent years, however, a subspecialty called adolescent medicine has sprung up to deliver comprehensive care to patients between 12 and 21 years.

Barely out of its own teens, adolescent medicine has produced a small but growing cadre of physicians—pediatricians and internists among them—working out of city clinics and suburban offices alike.

Why the interest in adolescent patients? Doctors cite several factors: "There is a growing professional awareness that teen-agers often respond better when treated directly—rather than through a parent—by doctors sympathetic to their desires for confidentiality and their struggles to be independent."

"Teen-agers today have more complex health needs and problems. These may range from acne to venereal disease, from weight control to birth control."

"Doctors now have more time to devote to teen-agers, both because of the birth rate drop and the eradication of many serious illnesses."

A 'Felicitous Meeting'

Underscoring the "felicitous meeting" of these factors, Dr. Adele Hofmann, president-elect of the 600-member Society for Adolescent Medicine, said:

"What we're talking about is a decade—age of human growth and development that has tremendously unique things happening emotionally and biologically."

Adolescence is an eventful, sometimes traumatic time for parents, too. Compounding the trauma may be the realization that their youngsters may now be legally treated and counseled without parental consent when it comes to such sensitive areas as contraception, pregnancy, venereal disease and drugs.

Even so, doctors with a sizable number of blue-janed patients in the wait-trust as just as vital to treatment as the drugs in their black bags.

"I tell kids that what goes on here between us is private, unless they give me permission to tell their parents," Dr. Robert Newburger, a Scarsdale, N.Y. internist, said.

Like most doctors, Dr. Newburger first explains his rules to parents of prospective patients. If the parents agree, the youngster then assumes responsibility for his own health care, for everything from making appointments to taking medications. Indeed, the parent's only contact with the doctor may be in the form of a puzzling bill.

"They may say, 'Gee, I wonder what Johnny went in for,' but they know they're not going to find out from me," Dr. Newburger insisted.

Doctors say that in serious medical situations, they solicit and usually get

"So we've grown," Dr. Morgenthau remarked, "just like the kids."

Elsewhere around the metropolitan area, at least eight clinics are treating thousands of teen-agers. A small number are under the care of private doctors, some of whom have special hours or even special waiting rooms equipped with stereos and receptionists who don't mind rock music.

What are the benefits to teen-agers in being treated by doctors who devote at least part of their time to this age group?

Clearly, the guarantee of confidentiality in sensitive matters is one benefit, but by no means the only one. Because of postgraduate training or wide exposure to adolescents or both, these doctors sometimes bring special skills—and uncommon compassion—to common teen-age complaints.

These complaints, according to sur-doctor was considering taking him off drugs. Then the boy began having seizures again.

The doctor, not attuned to adolescent psychology, automatically increased his convulsant medication. Still the seizures continued. By the time the boy reached the Bellevue clinic he was taking twice his normal dosage of medicine.

Or was he? In talks with the professional team, the boy admitted that he had stopped taking the medicine. He said he could no longer bear going down to breakfast each morning and hearing his parents' chorus, "Did you take your Dilantin, dear?"

"Here the parents continued to maintain the same level of supervision without giving him any self-control or autonomy," Dr. Hofmann explained. "We simply pointed this out, removed control from the family and gave it back to the boy. Within a month he was back down to his old dose."

In other cases, nothing may be wrong. The smallest boy in the class, the girl whose menstrual period has not yet arrived, simply need to know that everything will be alright in time.

Distinguishing the Normal

By taking a careful history, doctors familiar with adolescents can often plot out growth and anticipate sexual maturity, distinguishing the normal from the abnormal. As Dr. Morgenthau put it: "We can reassure when reassurance is indicated, investigate when investigation is indicated."

Parents also need reassurance that the doctor will inform and involve them, if necessary. At the same time, according to Dr. Iris Litt, assistant director at Montefiore Hospital's adolescent unit in the Bronx, "They have to understand that there may be visits for minor things they will never hear about."

"This is important in the development of maturity in the teen-agers to seek medical care on their own," she said.

Of course, it's the parents who pay for that medical care. And doctors with a special interest in the adolescent point out that bills, at least initially, may be higher than those of a pediatrician for the same condition.

"With teen-agers," as one doctor put it, "you're treating more than a case permission to involve the parents. Citing pregnancy as a serious example, Dr. Newburger said: "Some kids were glad to have the parents involved if I would act as a buffer, which I did."

"You need to be authoritative without being authoritarian," said Dr. Joan Morgenthau, who heads the adolescent medicine division at Mount Sinai Hospital in Manhattan, home of the country's largest outpatient clinic for teen-agers. This unit was started in 1968 with one basement office and one physician—Dr. Morgenthau. Today it occupies an entire building, employs a staff of 40 and provides a variety of services, including the clinic, which handles 16,000 patient veys, involve menstrual difficulties, acne, infectious mononucleosis, sports injuries, overweight problems and psychological problems.

But almost any illness takes on a psychological component during this stormy period. This is especially true of chronic illnesses—epilepsy, for example, diabetes, asthma or heart conditions—where the youngster who was always willing to follow a strict diet or take daily medication may suddenly rebel.

Dr. Hofmann, who is also director of the adolescent medicine division of Bellevue Hospital, spoke of a 15-year-old youth whose epileptic seizures had

$148 MILLION GIVEN FOR SEWERS ON L.I.

Caso Asserts U.S. Aid Will Enable Nassau to Reduce Its Taxes and Increase Employment.

By ROY R. SILVER
Special to The New York Times

MINEOLA, L. I., Sept. 6—Ralph G. Caso, the Nassau County Executive, announced today that the county would receive almost $148 million in Federal funds for sewer construction that would bring lower sewer taxes and an increase in employment.

The money, $147,996,250 for lateral sewer construction and design, is part of the funds authorized by the United States Environmental Protection Agency under the Federal Water Pollution Control Act amendment of 1972. The E.P.A. had allocated the money to the state.

"The ramifications of this award to Nassau's well-organized, on-going sewer construction program are tremendous," Mr. Caso said. "It will mean up to 800 additional jobs over the next several years for our unemployed trade and construction workers and significant reductions in sewer taxes."

Newly Released Funds

Until last December the Federal funds could be used only for treatment plants and large intercepted construction and not for costly lateral pipes that are put in street by street. In December some of the money was released for laterals, and Nassau was told it could expect $32 million.

"The State Department of Environmental Conservation had unexpended sewer funds that had to be committed by Sept. 30, 1977 or the money would go back to the Federal Government," Mr. Caso said. "We went in with an accelerated schedule of our lateral projects in Sewage District 3 and have the funds committed to us."

The Federal allocations represent 75 percent of the cost.

Sewer District 3 covers an area with a population of 80,000. Its rough boundaries are Meadowbrook Parkway on the west, the Suffolk County line on the east, the bay areas on the south and the Long Island Expressway on the north. Most construction work on the southern portion of the district—Merrick, Wantagh, Massapequa and Seaford—has been completed.

The eight areas where the lateral sewer lines will be placed with the new funds are North Bellmore, part of Seaford, East Meadow, Farmingdale, Levittown, Hicksville, Plainview and Carle Place-Westbury. Homes in these areas now use septic tanks.

Extension Sought

"It is my feeling that this large infusion of Federal funds for lateral construction can be used to benefit taxpayers in all of District 3 and not just those areas where the work is still to be done," Mr. Caso said. "With this in mind, I have directed the County Attorney to research the legality of making District 3 one collection district, instead of having separate collection districts."

All residents in District 3 pay a disposal tax for the maintenance, operation and bond interest on the Cedar Creek sewage-disposal plant, the ocean outfall pipe and the large interceptors in the district. Individual collection districts are taxed according to the cost of the lateral sewer construction in the district.

Mr. Caso estimated that the $147.9 million applied district-wide could mean a collection tax reduction of about 25 percent in those areas already paying, and a similar decrease in the anticipated collection tax for those areas where the work is still to be done.

The county's plans for the work must be filed by April, 1977, with approval expected by September. The funds are expected to be given to the county in 1978.

WOODCOCK SCORES FORD IN LABOR DAY MESSAGE

DETROIT, Sept. 6 (UPI)—Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Automobile Workers, said today that President Ford's way of fighting inflation was to create mass unemployment.

In a Labor Day message, Mr. Woodcock said the 1.7 million workers in the union "are demanding that the appalling rate of joblessness be ended; that the cruel rate of inflation be stopped, and that the soaring cost of health care be contained."

He said that working people wanted a Congress that would vote full employment legislation and a national health care bill and again called for the election this fall of Jimmy Carter, Democratic Presidential candidate.

"The country simply cannot endure any more economic Waterloos or political Watergates," Mr. Woodcock said, adding:

"He [President Ford] called for 'sacrifices' but the sacrifices were made by our working population."

He said that those sacrifices went beyond economic misery and were reflected in rising alcoholism, broken homes, child abuse, mental breakdowns and higher crime rates. Others, Mr. Woodcock said, avoided those same consequences of the worst recession since the 1930s.

"While more than 10 million workers were out of jobs and running out of unemployment compensation and health services, the sale of Cadillac's soared," he continued. "The nation has put men on the Moon and reached out to Mars, but its national leaders have lacked the national commitment to end misery here on earth."

Buffalo School Strike Backed

BUFFALO, Sept. 6 (AP)—The council of delegates of the 240-member Buffalo Teachers Federation has voted almost unanimously to recommend a strike tomorrow. The issue goes before the 3,500-member federation for a final vote tonight. The union is seeking a two-year contract with the Buffalo Board of Education, and the union president, Thomas J. Piza, has said more than 30 issues are in dispute.

PUZZLE questions must help you in dictionary work or is it vice versa? "Dictionary work helps with puzzles, since it increases the vocabulary of words I can deploy."

REVEALING yourself as a phenomenon of puzzles, can you describe your knack? "When I see a letter or two of a word—say the 3rd and 8th letters—often the word will flash into my mind...

OVER the years, have you improved at solving puzzles? "I can do them much faster than when I started, 30 years ago. Those in The Times take me about 10 minutes."

QUESTIONS that puzzle others evidently pose fewer problems for you. How have you managed that? "One part of it is good fortune in identifying literary references. If you don't know the quotation only guesswork may help."

SENSITIVITY to words is rare. Does a puzzle-solving encourage it? "If people are solving puzzles with any thought, the interesting features of words can be useful."

Still Taking Curtain Calls at 79, Howard Dietz Remembers It All

When Barbra Streisand sings the torch song "Moanin' Low" on television or Lawrence Welk mounts a big TV production of "Dancing in the Dark," Howard Dietz looks, listens and smiles contentedly to himself.

"That's 'Entertainment' for the 1953 movie version of 'The Band Wagon'?" Instead of writing, Mr. Dietz is doing more drawing these days.

Looking Back But looking back is not all Mr. Dietz does. Neither age nor Parkinson's disease, from which he has suffered for more than 20 years, keeps him from working.

Witty and Tender He had some of the written text and drawings brought out for inspection. Like many of his songs, the verses and pictures were by turns, at once witty and tender in their evocations.

From 128 Candidates The Jones cut was one of the most significant moves Coach Lon Holtz has made since he first met the Jets a few months ago and began to chop his way through 128 candidates.

There are so many things that happened to this team this year, it's made me wonder," he admitted. "I think about the New York Yankees and they're in first place, and Manager Billy Martin said he'd play as many black guys as he could if they help him, and I think about the Mets and how badly they're playing and don't have any black guys."

Appraisal Not Finished Scott was an enigmatic performer. The coaches would talk about his raw talent but not finish their appraisals. He was fast, but didn't always run his routes precisely, and he also disappeared from camp for a time.

Connors Reaches Quarterfinal With Dibbs, Kodes and Vilas

By PARTON KEESE

A Rhodesian, South African and Russian were eliminated from the United States Open tennis championships yesterday without international incident before a crowd of 16,145, the third largest in Open history.

The victors in these men's singles matches—Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, Eddie Dibbs of North Miami Beach and Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia—advanced to the quarterfinals. They were joined last night by top-seeded Jimmy Connors, who had little trouble ousting Vitas Gerulaitis of Kings Point, L.I., 6-4, 6-3, 6-1.

Two women moved into the quarterfinals, Evonne Goolagong of Australia and Natasha Chmyreva of the Soviet Union. The second-seeded Aussie ran through Francoise Durr of France, 6-2, 6-0, while the 18-year-old Soviet player avenged the defeat of Olga Morozova, her countrywoman, by beating Kathy Kuykendall of Miami, Fla., 3-6, 6-4, 6-3. Miss Kuykendall had eliminated Miss Morozova, the top-ranked Russian. There were no upsets on the sixth day of competition, and with a bright sun shining through cool, humidless air, there was hardly anything to get upset about.

Nevertheless, Kodes did get upset in turning back Frew McMillan, the South African with the two-handed grip, 6-4, 7-6, 2-6, 7-6. The three-of-five-set matches began in the men's round of 16; they had been playing two of three until yesterday.

As Kodes kept arguing, the fans began to offer their shouted opinions.

McMillan, looking correct in his soft white cap, also began to fume, and later he said the delay had probably helped send him to defeat.

"Arguing about a mark or a wrong call is only natural," he said. "I do it. We all do it. It's part of tennis. But something has to be done about disrupting play to such an extent. It's really not fair to the other player."

"All the umpire has to do is say, 'I'll give you 25 seconds to resume play.' If he counts to 25 and Kodes hasn't begun, he calls the match, and Kodes forfeits. It's the only way."

Kodes, who refused to discuss the incident, will meet Connors tomorrow.

After facing Connors for the first time on clay, Gerulaitis picked the left-hander as the "man to beat" for the title.

"Let's face it," said Vilas, whose best shots extended Connors for only an hour and a half, "Jimmy's ground-

Yanks Pin 6-5 Defeat On Red Sox

By MURRAY CHASS

The Yankees might have reached a new high in manager-player relations last night. Billy Martin gave Elliott Maddox his choice of positions for the game with the Boston Red Sox at Yankee Stadium.

The Yankees, after leading, 6-0, won, 6-5, after the Red Sox had rallied for three runs in the eighth.

Martin and Maddox never would form a mutual admiration society and a smart hostess never would invite them to the same party. Martin very likely didn't even want Maddox xactivated either time he was removed from the disabled list this season.

But there was the manager last night asking Maddox how he felt about playing right field.

"I told him my leg was a little sore, but I would play there if he wanted me to," said Maddox, who played six innings in center field Sunday in his first start since June 27. "Then he said what about dh and I said fine."

So there was Maddox lining a single to right field as the designated hitter in the second inning when the Yankees erupted for three runs against Rick Jones.

That was the only time Maddox batted. When his next turn came, with two on and two out in the third, the Red Sox switched pitchers, from Jones, a left-hander, to the Tom Murphy, a right-hander, and Martin wanted Carlos May, a left-handed hitter, to bat against Murphy.

But Maddox's brief appearance was heartening to the Yankees. If his surgical right knee holds up, he could be a valuable addition either in right field or as the designated hitter in the playoffs and the World Series, if the team travels that far.

It's doubtful, but Ron Blomberg also

Dave Anderson The Yankees' Voice of Experience

In the hours before the New York Yankees celebrated Labor Day by laboring against the Boston Red Sox last night, Gabe Paul was not celebrating the Yankees' lead in the American League East.

"What is it now?" somebody asked him. "Ten and a half games," Gabe Paul said. "You're not even smiling," he was told. "You never have enough," Gabe Paul said.

That's a baseball man talking. And that's what the 66-year-old Yankees' president is. In an organization aroused by the impetuous voices of George Steinbrenner and Billy Martin, the serene voice of Gabe Paul is equally essential. Gabe Paul is the voice of reason, the voice of experience, the voice of the American League East but until they do, he won't really smile.

"I've seen too many things happen in the past," he was saying. "Look what happened to the Phillies last week."

By losing eight consecutive games, the Philadelphia Phillies provided the Pittsburgh Pirates with hope, if not faith.

"Losing those games got the Phillies thinking they could blow it," he said. "It's like Branch Rickey used to say, 'Full minds and empty hats.' It's true. I remember when the Giants overtook the Dodgers in 1951 and I remember when the Cardinals overtook the Dodgers in 1942 — the Reds knocked the Dodgers out of first place that year by sweeping a doubleheader. Bobo Newsom bragged he was going to pitch both games but he got knocked out in the opener. Sucky Walters won that game and Ray Starr won the second game with only two days' rest. I remember Larry MacPhail [then the Dodgers' owner] was crying after the game and I told him, 'You got what you deserved.' He really lit into me. But in baseball, too many things can happen to assume you're going to win."

The Dispute With Crosley

But assuming that the Yankees win, it will be the first time that any of Gabe Paul's teams has finished in first place.

"At least when I was with them," he said. "I put together the '61 Reds but I had left Cincinnati after the 1960 season."

Ironically, his departure as general manager developed in a dispute with Powell Crosley, then the Reds' owner, over the advisability of the Reds playing part of their 1960 schedule in the Polo Grounds during the interlude between the desertion by the Giants and Dodgers and the birth of the Mets.

"I thought it would be bad for baseball and Cincinnati," he recalled, "but Mr. Crosley had me explore it anyway. I talked to Ford Frick, who was then the commisered. The inquiry held up the presentation to the winner and caused the ninth race start to be delayed until 6:31 P.M. In winning the historic Jerome— it was first held at Jerome Park in 1865— Dance Spell registered his fourth triumph in eight 1976 outings. He was clocked in 1:33 for the mile trip, and he added $66,600 to his earnings, which now are $152,310 this year. "My horse turned in a great performance out there," said Hernandez after the outcome had been made official. "He wanted to run, and down the backstretch I had to take a big hold.

Coming into the stretch, he just took off. I let him go, and he did the job." Soy Numero Uno, who had finished third a week ago yesterday in the Fall Hightweight with top weight of 137 pounds, handled well the 117 pounds assigned to him yesterday. But he failed to provide the final burst necessary for victory. The Strapco color bearer, asked to oppose nine 3-year-old rivals, also was kept close to the leaders for most of the race. He was kept in fourth place in the run down the backstretch and then was moved to third rounding the turn.

But Patrick Day, riding the prominent son of Damascus, was unable to keep his mount under a full head of speed in the run for home. "This horse rated well for me today," said Day. "He tried his best, but that race last week [the Hightweight] took its toll on him." Most of the contest's early excitement was provided by Clean Bill, the third-place finisher, who has never won a stakes event. Joseph Imperato, his jockey, sent him into command shortly after the start and kept him there as the field rounded the turn.

Intrepid Hero, In Record Time Takes United Nations Handicap

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 6—Intrepid Hero set a course record today in winning the $100,000 United Nations Handicap at the Atlantic City Race Course. The 4-year-old son of Forti ran the mile and three-sixteenths race on the grass in 1:52 3/5 and won by three-quarters of a length. Intrepid Hero, owned by Ogden Mills Phipps and ridden by Sandy Hawley, was a 2-1 favorite with the crowd of 9,460. Elmdorf's Improviser made a late bid and finished second four lengths ahead of Break Up the Game. The victor, who bettered Fil-t-o's course record set in 1967 by three-fifths of a second, returned $6.20, $4 and $3.40 for $2 across the board. Im-proviser paid $6.50 and $5.20 and Break Up the Game, $5.50. Bad Actor in Paddock Intrepid Hero, who has only been beaten once in a grass stakes race and that in the Arc of Triomphe in France last year, was reluctant to start today. He delayed the start for six minutes by refusing to leave his stall. After reaching the paddock, he became rank and had to be saddled in the tunnel leading to the track. Three men had to restrain him. "Bit he was all business in the running," John Russell, his trainer said after the race. The strapping colt carried 125 pounds, the top weight which was also borne by Erwin Boy who came in fifth. Intrepid Hero took a winner's prize of $65,000, raising his earnings to $145,795.

Jets Find Doors Open To Rookies

I wouldn't take anyone from the street. But I can't trust the player — it would be somebody known."
"No-o-o," she laughed, in response to a query, "I'm not a fan of football." But, in the background, came the voice of her 19-year-old daughter, Cornelia, shouting, "We are, we are!"
"Well," countered Mrs. Schmidt, "it would be exciting, I guess, for my daughter and her friends."
And then there's Mrs. Theilma Ilson, who wrote: "Since my oldest son is presently living in California and his brother and sister are going off to college, I am left with only my eleven year old son and have plenty of extra space. My husband and I would be able to provide a room with a private bath and television set."
In an interview, Mrs. Ilson elaborated: "I wrote that letter a split second after the broadcast. I think it would be something to be remembered the rest of my son's life. He's very sports-minded and you never know what influence an event in your life will have."
In a philanthropic gesture, Countess Maria Wolowski sent a succinct note on engraved stationery: "To rent no. To invite yes." Then she explained in softly accented voice: "I have large apartment and a maid. Really, they would have luxurious apartment for nothing. I go away for weekends and to Europe, so I would not be there."
She revealed that she was not familiar with the Jets ("I don't understand football—tennis, I know"), but that she recently lost her husband and "just wanted to do something nice."
And, finally, there's Mrs. Dona Brucker, writing in behalf of her in-laws, who have a four-bedroom ranch to rent. Mrs. Brucker identifies herself as "a season ticket holder" and signs off with: "Thanks, and good luck this year. There's nothing worse than sitting in a freezing rain and watching your team getting creamed!"

Colt Players Meet, Discuss a Boycott

BALTIMORE, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Baltimore Colts, clearly demoralized by the sudden resignation of their head coach, Ted Marchbroda, held a players' meeting today and discussed a possible boycott. Meanwhile, assistant coaches reportedly considered resigning, and one city official warned of a possible "rebellion by the fans."
Bert Jones, the starting Colt quarterback, said after the closed players' meeting this morning:
"Ted's done a hell of a thing. He's a man of principle, a man of reason, and it's a sad thing that he has to sit out a year, because he has one of the greatest coaching abilities and one of the greatest rapport that any man can have with people."
Jones, who acted as spokesman for his teammates after the meeting, refused to say whether the players had taken any vote or made any decision on a boycott.
After a second players' meeting, this afternoon, this time with General Manager Joe Thomas, Jones again refused to say what action his teammates would take, though he earlier had indicated that a boycott had been under discussion. He said the players would hold a meeting tomorrow after reporting to practice.
Thomas refused to meet with reporters, instead issuing a short statement saying:
"We hope to have the position of head coach of the Baltimore Colts resolved by Tuesday evening. We are exploring several avenues in our pursuit of a solution. The coaching staff is currently preparing for our game against New England this Sunday."
Marchbroda, having been berated by the Colts' owner, Robert Isray, after recent Colt losses in exhibition games, and stymied in his efforts to make personnel judgments, resigned yesterday after having failed to extract a promise that there would be no more "front-office interference."
The move by the National Football League's 1975 coach of the year, just one week before the start of a new season, shocked local fans and destroyed the harmony of a team that had rebounded from a 2-12 won-lost record two seasons ago to win the Eastern Division championship in the American Conference last year.

At least two assistant coaches—the defensive coordinator, Maxie and the offensive-line coach, Whitley Dovel—were reported considering their own resignations today. Neither was available for comment.
And City Comptroller Hyman Pressman, in a telegram to the commissioner, Pete Rozelle, urged him "to use your good offices to prevent a catastrophe."
Head Coach Marchbroda is held in extremely high esteem and there is danger of rebellion by the fans as well as the players," the Comptroller said in his message to Rozelle.
Marchbroda's assertion about interference apparently mainly concerned the decision by Thomas, the general manager, to surrender a veteran line-backer, Mike Curtis, in the expansion draft and the recent trading of a veteran backup quarterback, Marty Domres, an backup quarterback, a middle line-backer, returning from knee surgery, Marchbroda felt the Colts could ill afford to give up Curtis.
The Colts were hospitalized in nearby Florence for observation.
Frasson suffered bruises and was treated at the field hospital at the track.
Tullius Wins at Lime Rock
Special to The New York Times
LIME ROCK, Conn., Sept. 6—Bob Tullius of Herndon, Va., won the feature race today at the Sports Car Club of America's national championship. Tullius, driving a Jaguar XJ6 in competition for the first time, broke the lap record on the second lap as he defeated Sylvan Comblatt of Baltimore.
Elliot Forbes-Robinson of La Crescenta, Calif., was third in a Datsun 280Z in the 30-lap race over Lime Rock's 1.53-mile circuit.
Only 11 of the 24 cars that started the race were running at the finish. Five cars spun off the track. Van Twombly of Hillsdale, N.J., suffered knee and chest injuries when his Pantera went off the track and went into some trees.

Pearson Captures Southern 500; Petty 2d

DARLINGTON, S.C., Sept. 6 (AP)—David Pearson took the lead with 56 miles to go today as he drove his Mercury to victory in the 27th annual Southern 500 stock car race. Pearson became the second driver to win the sport's "Triple Crown."
Pearson seemed to have power to spare when he took the lead for good. He beat Richard Petty's Dodge to the finish line by 2.85 seconds for his ninth victory in 16 starts this season.
The only other driver to win the Daytona 500, the World 600 and the Southern 500 in one season is Lee Roy Yarborough, who achieved the feat in 1969.
Darrell Waltrip, driving a Chevrolet, was third, just behind Petty. Dave Marcis's Dodge was fourth in the same lap with the leaders. Lennox Pond in a Chevrolet was fifth, one lap off the pace.
The graying 41-year-old grandfather from Spartanburg, S.C., started the 500-mile, 366-lap race from the pole. He led only four times for a total of 93 laps—but that included the last 45. He successfully held off charges by Waltrip, who was running second when Petty passed him on the fourth turn of the final lap.

The first few minutes of the race over the 1.366-mile Darlington International Raceway were witnessed by the Democratic presidential nominee, Jimmy Carter, and the Republican vice presidential nominee, Robert Dole.
Pearson's average speed was slowed to 120.534 miles an hour because of eight caution flags for 64 laps. The longest caution period of 23 laps came at the halfway point when Joe Frasson's Chevrolet plowed into the side of Skip Manning's Chevrolet, pinning Manning in the car for about 30 minutes.
Manning, leader in the point race for the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing's rookie of the year title, had his feet caught in the wreckage. He suffered an ankle injury but a doctor said he had no broken bones. He Neither John Stearns, Mets' catcher, nor the fans managed to catch a foul ball hit by Joe Wallis of the Cubs in the sixth inning of the game at Chicago.

Koosman Defeats Cubs As Kingman Hits No. 34

CHICAGO, Sept. 6 — Dave Kingman doesn't know why, he says, but he seems to hit better at 60-year-old Wrigley Field than at most other National League ball parks. He couldn't explain the reasons today, but substantiating evidence was a long-sized home run and a double off the center-field that accounted for three runs in a 7-4 triumph for the Mets over the Chicago Cubs.

The homer was Kingman's 34th of the season, giving him the major league lead by one over Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt. It was his sixth homer in seven games this season at Wrigley Field. When he comes to bat, knowledgeable Cub fans remind friends that "King" hit a ball over two houses beyond the left-field fence last April.

With Kingman and the other Mets hammering six Chicago pitchers for nine hits, Jerry Koosman had little trouble hurling a complete game for his 18th triumph against eight defeats. The only year in which Koosman posted more triumphs was in 1968, his first year with the Mets, when he won 19.

"It was good to see the guys hitting today," said Koosman. "They were really swinging their bats, especially Kingman. I think he likes this park." To that Kingman said: "I do hit well here, but I don't know why. I don't hit the Cub pitchers that well in Shea Stadium, so it seems to be the park."

Baldwin Scores Twice
At any rate, Kingman blasted a shot more than 400 feet over the left-field screen with Billy Baldwin on base after a walk in the first inning to get the Mets off in the lead. And in a three-run fifth inning, he contributed a liner off the center-field fence for a double that drove in Baldwin again.

"I think I hit that one harder than the homer," said Kingman. "I think my timing is coming back." He returned on Aug. 27 after missing 35 games because of strained ligaments in his left thumb which he injured on July 18. Koosman surrendered nine hits and walked five batters but always seemed able to escape big trouble.

"I've pitched out of bad situations a lot of times this year," said Koosman, whose mother and nine other relatives from Morris, Minn., watched the game. "Today wasn't the first time." The toughest Cub for Koosman was Rick Monday who swatted a leadoff homer, his 28th, in the first inning and had two singles later in the game. His line hit to center in the sixth drive in the final two Chicago runs.

"I think we might be able to find a spot in our program for Monday," Manager Joe Frazier of the Mets. Manager Jim Marshall of Chicago probably has similar thoughts about Kingman.

Master's Degree Program for Executives

It can help you.

The graduate program for executives permits you to complete a 4-term Master's Degree course without interrupting your professional career. The program begins intensive one-semester instruction at a nearby weekend conference. For the remainder of the semester, classes are held each Friday at Uris Hall on the Morningside Heights Campus of Columbia University. Participants go through the entire program as an integrated group thus benefiting from a close working relationship which reinforces the learning process.

Richard Carlson, General Personnel Supervisor, Human Resources Planning, New York Telephone Company. "The program brought me up-to-date with current thinking and techniques in the business world. Just one of the specific benefits of the program was learning decision modeling. In addition, the program has given me some new understanding in the finance and marketing areas."

Applicants must be sponsored by their organizations. Tuition is $2,500 per semester which includes all books, study materials, meals and coffee breaks on Fridays as well as meals and room accommodations during the in-residence sessions. The Admissions Committee is now accepting applications. The final deadline for applications is December 1, for the class beginning January 9, 1977.

If you are anticipating moving up in management, then this program is a vital tool for your development.

Where can a woman find a secure New Direction... and the encouragement to try it? At Pace University.

Which new direction? Our program is called "New Directions for Women" because it can help you find a specific new direction... one that can help you increase your security by increasing your income... help you steadily and surely capitalize on your own interests, abilities and talents.

The program helps you select a specific new direction, then follows through with an organized program of education that offers you the necessary knowledge and skills needed to make your new direction really work.

Equally important, our New Directions program helps you to develop the confident sense of going somewhere. It is specifically organized to help those with jobs, with families and personal interests.

What about your previous education? Our New Directions students include women and men who have been away from the classroom for some time. Some have yet to complete high school. (You can complete it at Pace University.) Some people have taken a few college credits before marriage. Whatever your situation, we will help you evaluate your previous educational experience and help you obtain maximum credit toward one of our degree programs. You can also receive college credit for your life experience. We'll show you how it works when you visit us.

Your transition to academic work. Our faculty members are sensitive to your special needs during this transition. We do everything we can to help. For example, our New Directions program begins with and emphasizes individual academic and career counseling. There are even special courses entitled Career Explorations and Career Dynamics which will enable you to find the direction best suited to your interests and needs, and help you apply it for your career advancement. This makes your transition to academic work more natural and successful. Willing, thoughtful and friendly people are always on hand to encourage you every step of the way. Small classes and individual attention from our counselors and faculty members serve to increase the value you get from this program. You can earn any degree we offer.

When will your classes meet? Our New Directions students schedule their classes to suit their family and employment needs. Most classes take 50 to 90 minutes. Hours are flexible. Choices include: mornings, afternoons, evenings, weekends, or weekday Early Bird Classes starting at 7 a.m. Which fits your schedule best?

Is financial aid available? Financial aid is now available to half-time students in the form of a Basic Educational Opportunity Grant. This aid is based on need, not academic standing. Full-time students are eligible for even more extensive aid.

How can you start? You can start by dropping in for a friendly and informative visit next time you are in the neighborhood. The New Directions program is offered at our New York City and Pleasantville campuses. Just call for an appointment. We have streamlined procedures so that a single visit will give you full information.

When? You are invited to register early so that you can get classes that meet your schedule. You can apply any time. Classes start 4 times a year: September, January, June, July. Classes this fall start Friday, September 17. Call us for an individual appointment now.

A sincere desire to improve herself professionally is helping Armetta Meyer study part time for her bachelor's degree in Business Administration. She is now active as a secretary to a vice president. Her goal is to someday start her own business in the beauty field. She's on her way!

Time for a change. Bright and energetic Mary Perri has worked most of her life to support herself and her five children. But she was held back professionally because she lacked a college degree. Now she's getting it in human relations and management while working in the order department of a bookstore. Flexible scheduling and a government grant are helping her, on her way, and her children are cheering her on.

Some encouragement, and an interest in government and political science helped to make Rose Zuzowsky a member of the Pace University Senate. She got the courses she wanted... when she wanted them... and hopes to establish her own future role in government.

Introducing The Credit Account.

Once you have it,
you'll understand credit better, and know how to use it right.

The Credit Account* is pure bank credit.

A phone call or visit to European-American can get you the best kind of credit there is. Pure bank credit.

We call it The Credit Account. It's a separate account. Separate from your checking account. Separate from all other accounts. It's straight credit, pure and simple. Easy to use. Easy to understand.

Just qualify and we'll make from $1,000 to $10,000 available to you.

Then, whenever you need money—for any reason you choose—you've got it.

The Credit Account is a lesson in using credit to your advantage.

The Credit Account helps you use credit right, because it's credit with built-in advantages.

Here are some of the ways to use credit as it ought to be used.

Use The Credit Account instead of loans. You'll pay lower interest than on almost any installment loan.

Use it to pay off other credit that costs you more in interest. Like many department store charge accounts, credit card accounts, and revolving credit accounts.

Use The Credit Account to organize and pay off all your credit through one inexpensive credit source. One source, so you can review your entire credit picture at a glance.

And remember this, too: unlike some other kinds of credit, The Credit Account costs you nothing until you use it. Not a cent.

Another advantage: privacy.

Once you have The Credit Account, why and when you need money becomes what it should be. Your business. Not ours.

You only have to apply for the Account once. After that, there are no interviews when you need money. No application forms to fill out. No trouble.

Call (212) 895-3404.
(516) 248-7020
or (914) 761-6400.

You can get The Credit Account by phone, too. Call us from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. any weekday.

Give us the information we need. We'll get back to you as soon as possible with the amount of credit we can put in your Credit Account.

Or if you like, stop in at the European-American branch that's best for you.

The Credit Account will help you use credit the way credit was meant to be used. It's smart, and it works.

CHEMICAL INDUSTRY IS OPTIMISTIC ON BILL ON TOXIC SUBSTANCES

House Version Is Viewed as the Best Possible Deal—Extensive Tests Would Be Avoided

By STEVEN RATTNER After four years of lobbying, threatening and cajoling, the chemical industry believes that, in regard to control of toxic substances, it has won the best deal possible in a bill passed by the House of Representatives last week.

The bill, which is now in a conference committee to be reconciled with a Senate version passed in March, provides procedural controls designed to prevent hazardous chemicals from being sold without extensive tests for possible adverse impact on health or the environment.

Ford Victory Seen as Best For Economy by Executives

Large Majority Responding to Poll Favor Ford Over Carter and Are Optimistic on '77 Outlook

By ANN CRITTENDEN An overwhelming majority of the corporation and bank executives responding to a recent New York Times inquiry believe the re-election of Gerald Ford as President would be better for the nation's economy than a victory by Jimmy Carter.

The percentage supporting President Ford was 66 percent while only 8 percent believed that Governor Carter's election would provide a greater impetus for the economy. The remainder of those queried did not reply.

With President Ford, the country would have a "better chance of keeping inflation under control and restraining Federal spending," wrote Alfred Brittain 3d, chairman of the Bankers Trust Company, expressing an opinion that echoed almost exactly the sentiments of most of the respondents to the Times poll, who included 227 out of 537 of the country's top business executives.

The request elicited an impressive 227 replies within two weeks, enough to indicate clearly what the current mood of the nation's leading businessmen is toward the country's economic prospects.

In most respects similarities between their views and those of the Administration are striking. More than two-thirds of the executives, for example, characterized the current economic situation as favorable, and said they were optimistic about the economic outlook, with the economy continuing to improve slowly through the first quarter of 1977.

This is essentially the Administration's description of the economic situation. The President has argued that the Republican game plan, calling for a slow but steady and noninflationary recovery from the 1974-75 recession, is on target and has set the stage for steady, noninflationary growth through 1977.

Unemployment Drop Seen With this recovery, the Administration argues, unemployment will automatically drop. Sixty-three percent of the businessmen polled agree, stating that unemployment will improve during the remainder of 1976 and through the first quarter of 1977.

Market: An Autumn Zip Is in the Air

ARTANIG G. VARTAN It is a traditional time for business to feel its pulse, to economic tempo and the consumers for products ranging from cars to new clothes.

This time, the economics look good. The inflation rate has abated to half of its 10 percent-plus pace in 1974 and the Government's index of leading economic indicators, as of July, had climbed for 17 consecutive months.

On Wall Street, many analysts, professing puzzlement over the stock market's sideways movement during most of 1976, nevertheless expect stock prices to head higher this autumn.

Municipals May Be Nudging Year's Lowest Yields

JOHN H. ALLAN Rates on bonds issued by cities and towns have been declining in 18 months. That is good news for investors.

Corporate loans on their books, and from fire and casualty insurance companies, whose earnings have recently increased sharply.

By contrast, Connecticut, then rated triple-A, sold bonds on Feb. 25, 1975, near the market's peak in rates, that yielded from 3.85 percent in 1976 up to 6.10 percent in 1975.

Substitute PCB Sought

"We have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars over the last several years in an accelerated research and development program for an environmentally acceptable substitute that meets the standards for a reliable power capacitor," said a spokesman for the Westinghouse Electric Corporation.

The Monsanto Company, the only domestic producer of PCB, is planning to stop production by the end of 1977 and has already stopped selling the chemical for nonclosed system uses, such as in copolymers and printing inks.

The only opponent among the major chemical companies to the broader provisions was the Dow Chemical Company, which, like some analysts, worried that the working of the legislation would give too much flexibility to the E.P.A.

Cole, After G.M. Retirement, Finds Business Life Increasingly Active

Special to The New York Times DETROIT—Edward N. Cole is scarcely an average retired auto worker.

Edward N. Cole

Mr. Cole, who stepped down in 1974 as president of the General Motors Corporation, is now, at 66, trying to get the world's biggest airplane off the ground—a $12 billion project by International Husky Inc., a Detroit-based air cargo company he founded and serves as chairman.

Mr. Cole flies around the country in his own British-built turboprop plane—from Detroit to Ohio and back before lunch one day, then to New York for two days of business meetings.

His top priorities are his plane project, which, he believes, will lead to inexpensive air cargo for the first time, and the effort to develop new sources of energy to replace what he sees as a rapidly dwindling fossil fuel supply.

Mr. Cole says the Pentagon-backed "Airline Expansion Act" now in conference committee in Congress would enable the Government to guarantee loans to private concerns to develop and build the planes.

Among life's less-pleasant encounters must be included those with the Internal Revenue Service. Nevertheless, some two million of the more than 70 million individual tax returns filed each year are likely to be audited by the I.R.S.

Banks and Exchanges Closed

All banks in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut were closed yesterday in observance of Labor Day.

Both Joseph W. Sullivan, the president of the Chicago Board Options Exchange, and Paul Stevens, the vice president for the Amex's options division, said they doubted there would be any significant changes in options trading because of the changes in the capital gains taxation laws.

upon, they failed to take up the capital gains provisions.

There has also been comment in the investment community about the effect of the change in the holding period on the trading of options.

Another point of view heard on Wall Street was enunciated by Donald B. Marron, the president of Mitchell, Hutchins Inc., who said he felt the effects of the changes would "not be very significant either way," but that he, nevertheless, thought that "a big firm, Michael J. Johnston rates Mr. Carter as having better than a 50-50 chance of winning, but he adds: "I think the election will be very close." Meanwhile, as the campaign heats up and the television debates get under way, Mr. Johnston believes that the Democratic candidate will assuage the principal fears of investors about his program by spelling out plans to reduce unemployment and by disavowing "any runaway monetary policy."

"My personal opinion," said Mr. Johnston, who is research chief for Mitchell, Hutchins, "is that the market is likely to go up during the next two months."
In general, Wall Street's favorite in the race is President Ford, on the grounds that he is both a Republican and "a known quantity." His backers include Gustave L. Levy, senior partner of Goldman, Sachs & Company, and James W. Davant, chairman of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis.
It may come as some solace to Ford partisans that historical precedent is in his favor. In 16 of the 19 Presidential races since 1900, when the Dow industrials were higher on Election Day than on Jan. 1, the incumbent party remained in office. On that score, Mr. Ford should have little worry, inasmuch as the industrial average finished last year at 852.41.

London and Zurich are the largest markets for gold. In Zurich, the price was up 1/16 cent to $113.44 an ounce, a Paris to $115.20 and up 55 Milan.
The auction next week is the series of sales of the international gold holdings. The sales seriously depressed the gold on world markets.
In London, the dollar edged down everywhere except in London and London the pound closed at $1.7730. In Frankfurt, the dollar at 2.5232 marks, up slightly on Friday.
The dollar lost half a French franc to 262.75 francs. In Amsterdam, the dollar at 2.6335 guilders from Zurich the rate was 2.4810 against 2.4825 Friday, and was worth 841.05 lire against the yen.
The yen also dropped slightly in Tokyo at 288.05 yen, in comparison with 288.45 on Friday. The close, as up from today's opening. The greater number of yen marks there are per dollar, the more yen per unit of those currencies.

Townsend Brown 2d, portfolio manager at Wood, Struthers & Winthrop, is a Carter partisan who believes that the Democrat "is better for the country and for the stock market than Ford."
"But I think the market will go up even if Ford wins," he declared. "Moreover, for the next year or so, it shouldn't make a great deal of difference who wins, since the economy is on a momentum of its own and the budget is already set for a year ahead."

Optimistic Wire Sent
Accordingly, Mr. Brown dispatched this wire last week to foreign clients: "Believe market poised for strong rally. Interest and inflation rates both heading down. Healthy recovery continuing after slight pause."
Harold Ehrlich, president of Bernstein-Macaulay, an investment counseling firm that manages money for Arizona and Hawaii state retirement systems, among other clients, observes: "I think the market is fairly valued now and offers no particular bargain, but my best guess is that it will trend upward during the next two months."
On the other hand, Francis H. M. Kelly, research director at Blyth Eastman Dillon, suggests that stock prices will weaken before Election Day. He envisages a slowdown in economic growth that will lead to endorsement by both candidates of an easier money policy by October. Mr. Kelly, a student of "election cycles," takes the whole question back to Square 1. "I don't want to throw cold water on the idea that the threat of a change in Presidents is a significant factor in market behavior during an election year," he stated.
Looking ahead to 1977, meanwhile, he sees "a major recovery for the stock market."

When it comes to employee trusts, one bank stands out.

As you may have gathered from the Bankers Trust symbol pictured on the left, our Employee Benefit Trust Division really is outstanding. Not only in the scope of our services, but more importantly, in attitude. Few, if any, banks are willing to be a money manager and a directed trustee and a master trustee and keep employee thrift and profit sharing records and disburse benefits and supply benefits research. Bankers Trust has made a commitment to provide all these services, or any one of them. And we're staffed in depth for all the work that this entails. Our benefits research efforts, for example, are unique in the industry, and recognized as such. We can provide you with more comprehensive information than any other bank. We're the nation's foremost Directed Trustee and Master Trustee. In fact, we pioneered in these fields, as well as savings plans, stock purchase plans, employee record keeping and active bond management, among others. In the pension business, we've had some 60 years of experience. No matter what your company's needs, Bankers Trust can handle your employee benefits requirements with a competence, professionalism and enthusiasm unequalled in the industry. But this isn't limited to employee trusts alone. In fact, wherever you see the Bankers Trust Pyramid, you're dealing with a full service bank in the fullest sense of the word, with the capacity to raise, lend and manage money worldwide. A visit to the Pyramid can be a rewarding experience.

KEY OFFICERS BACK FORD OVER CARTER

the impact of the election would come later, in 1978 and 1979.

Nevertheless, of those who believe the election will matter in the near term, 89 percent support Mr. Ford. Concern about Government spending was clearly a key reason for the widespread support of the President, who was praised by many of the businessmen for his frequent use of the veto to defeat spending measures passed by Congress.

The President, as one respondent put it, is "a necessary fire-break against a liberal, over-zealous Congress."

Concern about increased Government intervention in business was expressed by a number of executives such as James E. Lee, president of the Gulf Oil Corporation, who listed the "adversary relationship between Government and business" as the second-most-important economic problem facing the country.

Gulf has had numerous difficulties with the authorities stemming from disclosures of its bribery overseas and illegal payments to politicians in this country.

Another worry frequently cited was what Fletcher L. Byrom, chairman of the Koppers Company, called "decapitalization of industry," or the difficulty of maintaining adequate levels of investment in industries requiring heavy expenditures for capital equipment.

A number of the businessmen also expressed uncertainty about Governor Carter's attitudes toward business, although behind the fear of the unknown quantity in the Democratic candidate lurked the suspicion, among many, that "inflation would increase under his leadership," as James F. Bere, chairman of the Borg-Warner Corporation put it.

A few businessmen were more blunt. Ian MacGregor, chairman of Amstar Inc., explained his preference for President Ford by stating that "the Democratic Party is the party of big spending, big government, big commitments to labor."

Governor Carter, another anonymous Ford supporter wrote, "is wistful, and whimsical."

Belgian Commission Suspends Foreign-Owned Bank a Week

BRUSSELS, Sept. 6 (Reuters) — The Belgian Banking Commission said it had appointed a special commissioner to the Banque Par l'Amerique du Sud and suspended all the bank's activities for a week, except repayment of customer deposits in Belgium.

The Banque Par l'Amerique du Sud is a Belgian registered bank 100 percent owned by a private foreign group.

The commission said the suspension would apply until the start of business Sept. 13. Fernand van Bever, the commissioner put in charge of the bank for the week, said the commission had acted on liquidity grounds, but he declined to elaborate.

of chemicals; that's not the problem," said Etycl Blair, director of health and environmental research at Dow. "But the power given into the hands of the administrator makes it a dictator of what constitutes an imminent hazard. This is getting into politics and is far away from toxicity and testing."

Politics entered into the industry's decision to support the House measure. The companies were fearful of the Senate measure. It would have required, among other things, the E.P.A. to test every new product or publish the reason that it had chosen not to.

The bill went to the Senate-House conference committee last week, and advocates in both chambers are cautiously optimistic that a bill acceptable to the White House will emerge.

If a bill is signed into law by the President, the industry's next move would be to the E.P.A., which will be responsible for drafting the regulations to implement the bill's provisions.

"Until we get the regulations from the E.P.A., we really won't know what we have," commented William J. Driver, president of the Manufacturing Chemists Association. "Implementing the regulations can now be just as critical as passing the act."

"This is the most important piece of legislation affecting our industry to be considered in maybe the next 10 years," Mr. Driver said. Nonetheless, he maintained, "We didn't lobby any more than usual."

COLE, RETIRED AT G.M., IS ACTIVE IN BUSINESS

owners of the ships and lease them to the users."

Mr. Cole, however, is not marking time while waiting for the plane project to move through Congress.

International Husky, Uniroyal Inc., and the Rocket Research Corporation signed an agreement on Aug. 13 with Kuwait to construct a plant there to make hydrazine from natural gas. Hydrazine, which is used as a rocket fuel, would be used in the Kuwaiti project for agriculture, in making plastics and to stimulate oil-well production.

Mr. Cole's most intriguing use for it, though, would be in powering cars. "It can be burned in an internal combustion engine with the necessary modification," he said. "We are testing one on an engine dynamometer now."

Contract With Kuwait

"There are problems of corrosion and toxicity. On the other hand, it can be burned without exhaust pollution. Rocket Research is convinced hydrazine is a candidate to replace gas."

Mr. Cole was a strong advocate of the use of nuclear power. "Fossil fuels are limited, and there is no other way but nuclear power in the energy field," he said. "Breeder fusion reactors are going to come."

"Once they are in use we can look to a new energy base for mobile purposes. It will be the start of the hydronitrogen energy age's replacing the hydrocarbon energy fuels we now use."

"How? Most large cities are on large bodies of water. The breeder fusion plants will either be submerged in these water bodies or situated on platforms over the water. They will supply heat and electricity to the populated areas."

"However, the plants must have the capability to take the peak requirements and, therefore, there will be off-peak capacity to make chemical energy for mobile purposes that can be stored and distributed and used like gasoline."

"Hydrazine is one of those fuels that can be made from nuclear energy, using air and water as the feed stocks. It is a high-energy density fuel. There are many problems, but if we don't use it there will be some other hydrogen system using water as a feed stock for the mobile fuel of the future."

Trying to Interest Others

Mr. Cole's effort is not to go into engine or car or fuel production but "just to get others interested in looking down the road at this matter of energy for the future," he said.

When he left the auto industry in September 1974, it was in the midst of a slump triggered by the Arab oil embargo and manufacturers were making plans to bring out smaller, more efficient cars, which are being introduced this month as 1977 models.

"The rotary has characteristics that still make it a very viable future candidate," Mr. Cole said. "A hybrid gas turbine and electric also is going to be looked at."

"Does he miss his job at G.M.?" "No," he replied emphatically. "There are restraints on the industry now, and I am finding interesting and profitable things to do on the outside."

A salute to the Viking team from the company that's working on the Space Shuttle.

The Viking landings on Mars were remarkable feats. Imagine: safely placing two 1300-pound laboratories of instruments on an alien surface after 11-month journeys across almost half a billion miles of space. Incredible.

Viking team, congratulations. Your achievements in advancing the frontiers of knowledge are an inspiration to all of us. The Viking missions are the first steps in searching for life beyond earth. We look forward to another major step in space capabilities, the Space Shuttle, to be operational in 1980.

The Shuttle is NASA's reusable space transportation system. It will carry to and from earth orbit cargo ranging from satellites to fully equipped scientific labs. Its benefits to future space science missions will be significant.

Future Planetary Explorers. The Shuttle will transport exploration spacecraft with their propulsion stages to earth orbit, where the Shuttle crew will check them out and launch them to the planets. A Shuttle orbiter launch will substantially reduce spacecraft and operational costs. The spacecraft can be half again as large and heavy as present explorers. And if it should fail a check-out test, it can be repaired in orbit or brought back to earth for repair.

Scientists in Space. The Spacelab, being developed and paid for by the European Space Agency, will be a key Shuttle cargo. The advantages Spacelab offers are unprecedented. This multipurpose laboratory will allow scientists to accompany their equipment both into space, where they will work on their investigations, and back to earth. The Shuttle can carry a crew of up to ten people per flight to work in a gravity-free environment, and to study the earth at once.

Orbital Astronomy. The space telescope will be one of the most valuable scientific tools of the Shuttle era. In orbit above our cloudy, turbulent atmosphere, it will give astronomers an undistorted view of the heavens, unobtainable on earth, to search the farthest reaches and secrets of the universe. The Shuttle crew will place the telescope in orbit, check it out, service it when needed, and eventually return it to earth for replenishment and reuse.

New Space Facilities. The Space Shuttle will significantly contribute to the growing needs of mankind through development of permanent space operations. Among the possibilities being considered are: Global environmental monitoring. Special in-space medical research labs. Space broadcasting stations. And finally, large permanent space structures where workers will assemble satellite solar power stations for production of clean, continuous energy and where they will manufacture new industrial products. This is the beginning of an extensive range of future undertakings with untold possibilities.

It's hardly surprising that the Viking landings were spectacular successes. For America has the technology, the skills, and the determination to range as far as our imaginations and needs impel us.

Probes such as Viking will continue to open distant doors. And the Shuttle will give scientists a space base from which to peer beyond them; an orbiting lab from which to study the earth, and space facilities to improve the quality of life for all on earth.

Linking 6 Automated Clearing Houses by a Fed Network Is Debated

Sept. 6—A planned link of six of the nation's clearing houses through the national network of the Federal Reserve System has created a debate over the proper role of the Government in clearing houses...

that inter-regional transfers would move directly, without the need of computer tapes and couriers.

Proponents of the program insist that it is only a test to identify what potential problems might arise in a telecommunications network linking the clearing houses.

Advocates of the test, including the American Bankers Association, said that the use of the Reserve's "Fed wire" computer system in the test was expedient and logical, because the reserve operated all but two of the country's 24 automated clearing houses.

Critics of the test, including the White House Office of Telecommunications Policy, acknowledged that the Government's presence in this particular program might be defensible, but urged that a national policy for electric fund transfers be established before such programs proliferate unchecked.

"There are a lot of things we don't know," about such a system, said H. L. Baynes, president of the National Automated Clearing House Association, "and we need to build a body of expertise."

Mr. Baynes said that the Federal Reserve's presence in such a test would "not foreclose the option" of future operation of the system by the private sector.

A senior official at the Federal Reserve said that "the member banks asked us to participate" in the program "because we have a wire system and the processing capability needed to conduct such a test."

Thomas K. McKnight, assistant general counsel to the Office of Telecommunications Policy, said that his office understood the "benefit" of telecommunications technology "because it's spectacular."

Mr. McKnight said, "We believe it would be prudent to hold the program in abeyance until Congress and the National Commission on Electronic Fund Transfers are given the opportunity to articulate a national policy."

Mr. McKnight expressed his concern that establishment of so-called "pilot" programs might continue unabated until Congress was presented with a "fait accompli"—the control by the Government of electronic fund transfer media.

"The Government is engaged in an essentially private sector capability" in this test, Mr. McKnight said, adding that his office was worried about "the spectre of a Government agency providing a custodial role over information that flows virtually at the speed of light in the wrong hands, it can be abused."

William Moroney, assistant director for public relations at the American Bankers Association, characterized the critics as "looking for spoils in the night."

TV: 'Thames on 9' Is a British Showcase

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR
The new television season will not be delivered officially for a couple of weeks, but WOR/Channel 9 has managed, in this current period of inevitable prenatal hoopla, to divert a remarkable amount of attention to its infinitely more modest operations.

a drama called 'The Naked Civil Servant' which can be seen this evening at 10 P.M. Based on the life of Quentin Crisp, who introduces the program and who is now in his late 60's, Philip Mackie's script explores with remarkable sensitivity the world of a flamboyantly effeminate homosexual.

For this observer, at least, whose knowledge of farms and natural cycles while growing up in the streets and tenements of the Bronx was limited largely to snickering traveling-salesmen jokes, the glimpse of Geoffrey Morton's way of life proved to be fascinating. 'Thames on 9' richly deserves extensive sampling this week.

FORD-CARTER

Head-to-Head on the Issue

Exclusive Interviews -Before the TV Debates

Candidates Ford and Carter meet this week on neutral ground, each one to answer a number of interesting questions about what he'll do, where he stands, what he'll change, why he'll win.

U.S. News & World Report, in the current issue, has side-by-side interviews with President Ford and Governor Carter. They are exclusive interviews done in the celebrated U.S. News manner. That means intelligent, probing, purposeful questions, well-thought-out in advance—the kind that bring to light fresh answers, original news information.

This week, you get both sides of the race for the Presidency—from the candidates themselves.

Every week you get reliable and unbiased news from this news magazine—both sides, all sides, and no side-taking.

U.S. News is the "neutral ground" that so many news-makers choose as their podium, to get across their ideas and opinions to intelligent Americans. National and world figures on both sides of a variety of significant issues come to 23rd & N Streets in Washington, for give-and-take sessions with our editors. In months just past U.S. News has published side-by-side interviews with...

WASHINGTON D.C.

- Senators Harry Byrd, Jr. and Gale McGee on the Panama Canal
  - Secretaries Kissinger and Rumsfeld on foreign policy
  - Senators Joseph Biden, Jr. and Edward Brooke on budget
  - Senator Gary Hart and businessman H. J. Haynes on tax companies
  - Senators Edward Kennedy and Robert Taft, Jr. on air quality in the Midwest
  - Commissioner Edward Mason and Professor H. W. Miller on risks of nuclear power
  - Psychoanalyst van den Haag and Lawyer Louis B. Brandeis on the death penalty
  - Senator Edmund Muskie and Administrator John I. Leland on clean air standards
- and again that many more.

Hurry to your favorite newsstand for this week's U.S. News & World Report with the exclusive side-by-side interviews with Candidates Ford and Carter.

And after that, stick around by subscription—for more issues of reliable, "both-sides" news reporting. There to fill out in your newsstand copy.
